

November 1903

The Green Camp.

$200 Prize Story.

F. E. Chase.

Saint Devil.

Sarah Comstock.

Miss Robin Hood.

$110 Prize Story.

Willi B. Wilder.

The Lynching at Crutcher's.

David Lowry.

The Door Without a Keyhole.

J. L. Davies.

Keep Your Feet Dry

Sorosis Shoes for Boys and Girls.

One of the cardinal rules of good health, and one nobody denies.

But few persons reflect that the feet may be wet in two ways—from within and from without.

Send 10 cents for copy of Old Cobbler picture
(see The Black Cat for August and September) and Story
Catalogue
“Sharpness of Steele.”

There is little use in piling up defenses against rain and wet pavements, if you thereby cause your feet to sweat. In fact, if you will ask your Doctor he will tell you that it would be better your feet should be wet from without than from within—rain-water is distilled and pure, perspiration is a waste product.

Sorosis Shoe
Dressings, Boot Trees,
Laces, Horns, etc., etc., are guaranteed by Sorosis Trade
Mark.

You should have shoes that will keep water out that is out, so far as possible, and let water out that is in.

The Sorosis Health leather allows the insensible perspiration to evaporate, but forbids the outer dampness to penetrate.

Our best advertisement is the glow of satisfaction created in the feet of our customers.

In all our stores or departments ask to see the new

Stores and Departments all over the world.
Home Office,
Lynn, Mass.,
A. E. Little & Co., Mfrs.

Sorosis Health Leather

PARFUMERIE ED. PINAUD, PARIS.

Science has imprisoned a world of sweetness in one drop of ED. PINAUD'S "FOSCARINA" perfume. Presented in original Baccarat cut-glass bottle. The quality justifies the Price.

1 oz. bottle, $1.65

SOLD EVERYWHERE

2 oz. bottle, $3.25

Or, if not obtainable of your dealer, write to Ed. Pinaud's American Offices, Ed. Pinaud Building, New York.

Indian Basketry Taught by Experts

You can make from $7.00 to $15.00 per week

ANYONE CAN LEARN
IT AT HOME
BY MAIL.

COMPLETE
OUTFIT AND COURSE,
ONE DOLLAR

Your Work, Done at Home, Purchased by Us

Write to-day, enclosing $1.00 for Complete Course of instruction, illustrating illustrated lessons in detail, together with an outfit of material and colored Rappia, Yarns, Needles, and a started basket. A delightful and lucrative pastime for women. Latest fad. Make Beautiful Indian Baskets for the Holidays. Course and outfit sent prepaid, for $1.00 anywhere in the United States or Canada. Order to-day.

ORIGINAL APACHE SCHOOL OF INDIAN BASKET
WEAVING, 270 Canal Bldg., Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

LADIES-BEADS FREE-GIRLS.

Make pretty Chains, Beads, Purses, Fobs etc. Our booklet telling how to make Oriental and Indian Fancy Work and a card of Beads for a fee. stamp. Evening Hours, SEPT. 85, WEEHAWKEN, N. J.

Edison Records

IMPROVED HARD MOULDED

50c each, $5.00 per doz.

Delivered Anywhere in U. S.

Send for CATALOGUE "B"

J. N. Blackman 19 Beekman St
N. Y. CITY

Let the failures and discouragements of the past be forgotten. The future is before you. You would not go into battle unprepared; then why undertake the battle of life unprepared? Be a specialist in one profession, and you will find a place in the world.

"Formerly men were educated BY their work;—later, they were educated FOR their work;—now the Correspondence Institute of America educates men AT their work."—Quoted from Am. P. Clark.

We offer the following Courses for home study:

Electrical Engineering, Illustrating,
Advertising, Journalism,
Proofreading, Practical Electricity,
Bookkeeping and Stenography.

Our instruction in these Courses is thorough and will equip you fully.

Write for copy of our big book, entitled, "Struggles With the World," and mention the Course which interests you.

CORRESPONDENCE INSTITUTE OF AMERICA,
Box 650, Scranton, Pa.

I Can Double Your Salary

If you are Earning Less than $25 Per Week

I can double your salary or income by teaching you how to write catchy, intelligent advertising.

My System of Instruction by Mail is the only one in existence that has the hearty endorsement of the great experts and publishers, and I am anxious to send my prospectus, together with the most remarkable facsimile proof ever given in the history of correspondence instruction, if you are interested. I will show you how to earn from $25 to $100 per week.

Roy Latta, Advertising Manager of Lyman Bros., Cedar Rapids, Ia., and Harry Cowan, Advertising Specialist, Ottawa, Kans., herewith represented on the entering wedge, are further testimony to my ability to place young men where they deserve to be.

But get my Instructive Prospectus.

George H. Powell, 51 Temple Ct., New York

PLAY ANY INSTRUMENT

success. Hundreds write: "Wish I had known of your school before." For booklet, testimonials and FREE tuition contract address

U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 450, 19 Union Square, New York, N. Y.

Government Positions

14,983 Appointments were made to Civil Service places during any previous year. Excellent opportunities for young people. Hundreds of those whom we prepare BY MAIL for the examinations are annually appointed. Full information about all government positions free. Write for our Civil Service Catalogue and dates of examinations.

Columbian Correspondence College,
837-85 Pa. Ave. S. E. WASHINGTON, D. C.

SONG-WRITERS A SUCCESSFUL SONG AND POETS will MAKE YOU RICH.

We write music to your words. complete and arrange compositions. Green Music Co., 361 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

FREE ADVICE IN ALL LEGAL MATTERS

Especially on Marriage and Divorce, Partnership, Mortgages, Bills of Sale, Deeds, Bonds, Notes, Stocks, Mining, Mining Investments, Contracts, Agreements, Collections, Damages, Claims, Interest, Homestead, Wills, Estates, etc., etc. Correspondence strictly confidential. Address

LEGAL BUREAU, Dept. K

1129 Market Street San Francisco, California

PLAYS FOR AMATEURS

The largest stock in the U. S.
Any title in print

Our catalogue is sent FREE for the asking. It includes Plays, Recitation and Dialogue Books, Books of Etiquette, Letter Writing, Games, Boys' and Girls' Stories, etc.

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY
949 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

PHOTOS FROM LIFE

Model studies, Stereos, Beauties, etc., 100 small photos and two large ones, $1 note.
S. Recknagel, Nachf. Munch (Germany).

Learn to Entertain

Five Good Tricks, complete apparatus, full directions, post free 15 Cts. Catalogue free. Books of "Card Tricks," "Coin Tricks," "Parlor Tricks"

164 Pages each, 25 cts. a book. Trick Cards, 10 cts. Trick Cards and any book, 30 cts.

FREE If you will order all 3 Books we will include the Trick Cards and 5 Tricks Free.

BAILEY & THIPP CO., Box B. C., Cambridgeport, Mass. Manufacturers of Magical Apparatus.

'FEMINOLOGY'

Table of Contents and sample pages FREE. A scientific book for women, one of the most valuable works ever written. It treats of marriage, care of babies, diet, nursing, children's diseases and their care, physical culture, personal beauty, giving information that is all important to health and happiness. Has 700 pages, beautifully illustrated, and 20 colored plates.

"If the information contained in FeminoLOGY were more widely and timely known and heeded, endless and needless miseries might be avoided."—Chicago Tribune. Write for 30-page table of contents and see what this valuable book contains.

C. L. Dressler & Co., 3726 Gladys Av., CHICAGO, ILL.

LEARN TO WRITE ADVERTISEMENTS

When you think of learning to write advertisements you think of Page-Davis Co., because it is an assured fact that everything to qualify you as an advertisement writer is taught by

PAGE-DAVIS CO.

The fact that Page-Davis Co. is the oldest institution and the most substantial of its kind in the world today, means much to you. "Page-Davis Men" are in demand because Page-Davis Graduates are recognized as knowing the business; that is why they earn from $25.00 to $100.00 Per Week. That is why this Original School has always been the biggest, best and most substantial institution of its kind in the world. We teach you the business by mail—thoroughly, practically. Our handsome Prospectus mailed free on request, will tell you more about it.

PAGE-DAVIS COMPANY,

517E ST., 20 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

LEARN ADVERTISING

If you want to know how to do your advertising at less cost, if you wish to become an advertising writer or manager at $50 to $100 weekly, if you wish to gain knowledge that will positively increase your salary or income, send three c. stamps for prospectus telling "Who Should Study Advertising," and booklets, "The Ill Fortunes of Brother Bill," "Other People's Brains," and "How Shall a Young Man Succeed."

CHARLES AUSTIN BATES, 190 William St., N.Y.

Manuscripts

Corrected, Corrected and Placed
Writers advised by expert literary work, thoroughly in touch with leading publishers, and familiar with their wants. Sales negotiated. Terms very moderate. Write for booklet describing Department of Manuscripts of the School of Journalism.

National Correspondence Institute,
30-51 Second National Bank Building,
Washington, D. C.

PRESS CORRESPONDENCE

And JOURNALISM are pleasant, profitable and uncrowded professions. We offer a Complete Correspondence Course of instructions, covering both branches, that is within reach of all. Send for Booklet with full particulars.

AMERICAN PRESS BUREAU, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Fifth edition, 100 pages. Lists every publication that pays for contributions, with blanks as to needs, rates, etc. $1.00 Postpaid.

THE EDITOR

A journal of information for writers. Practical articles, news of literary market. Edited by Jack London. Sample copy free. THE EDITOR, 150 Nassau Street, New York.

500 PLACES TO SELL MSS.

CARICATURE

Get this out, mail it with your name and address. You will receive a beautiful illustrated book and FREE lesson, with photos of prominent artists at work.

NATIONAL SCHOOL OF CARICATURE

Studios, 1st Floor, World Bldg., N.Y. Dan McCarthy, Director

LEARN PROOFREADING

A profession that offers literary opportunity with pecuniary profit is one that intelligent people desire. We, the original proofreading school, can prepare you for the work more thoroughly than any other.

HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

Authors' Agency.

FIFTEENTH YEAR. Candid, suggestive Criticism, literary and technical Review, Disposal.

REFERENCE: Mesekiah Butterworth, Mrs. Burton Harrison, Thos. Nelson Page, Mary E. Wilkins, and others.

Send stamp for Booklet to W. M. A. DRESSEN, R. 10, 400 Broadway, Cambridge, Mass.

Mention The Black Cat.

STUDY ART

AN ART EDUCATION FOR $1

"How to Illustrate" is a self-instructing book. It is splendidly illustrated. The instruction is thorough, practical, complete, unbridled.

It is emphatically not a cut-price substitute for higher-priced methods, but better, quicker, and cheaper than correspondence schools, for the same reason that a modern express train is better, quicker, and cheaper than an old-time stage-coach.

Written by Charles Hope Provost, artistic contributor to Life, Scribner's Monthly, Harper's Monthly, Harper's Weekly, Herald, World, Evening World, Evening Journal, Illustrated Magazine, etc., etc., etc., teacher of 4,000 people by mail, organizer of correspondence art instruction.

CONTENTS.

TECHNIC—Working with pen, brush (oil and water color), pastel, grease, and conte crayon, lead pencil, carbon pencil, scratch paper, chalk plate, Ben Day machine, silver print work, etc. Also the various effects used by pen artists, including quick and slow lines, English and American styles of treatment, zig-zag lines, booked lines, quick lines, double cross hatching, stippling, spatter work, etc. Wash drawings. Disperser drawings. Tracing and copying photographs. What materials to use, including papers, canvases, and Bristol boards. Tools and how to handle them. Drawing from nature, including landscape, flowers, animals, figures, portraits, etc. Drawing from memory, with table showing comparative measurements of different parts of the human body—head, hands, feet, legs, arms, etc. COLOR—Primary and secondary colors, etc., explained. How to mix different shades, etc. ARTISTIC ANATOMY—The bones and muscles as applied to pictorial work. LETTERING—Copying and originating. Roman, block, old English, and script style shown. Elementary, historic, and geometric ornament. Conventionalization of flowers, ornamental composition, pictorial composition (including form and color arrangement and balance), fashion work, caricaturing, cartooning. FACIAL EXPRESSION—Sorrow, joy, anger, fear, contempt, laughter. Aerial and linear perspective. BUSINESS DETAILS—How to sell pictures, how to get a position as an artist, prices and salaries paid, list of names of publishers and others who buy work, how to pack pictures to send by mail or express, etc., etc. Explanations of various engraving and reproductive processes.

"How to Illustrate" sent prepaid to any address in the world for $1.00. (Limp covers).

A more handsomely bound edition in stiff covers, $1.50 prepaid.

$500 IN PRIZES for the best copies of the first picture in the Self-Instructing Book, "How to Illustrate" (open to everybody who takes advantage of the above offer promptly). A committee of well-known artist contributors to leading publications will decide the winner, thus guaranteeing absolute fairness. We cannot enter into any correspondence relating to this Prize Contest, but will give full particulars to all who send money with above special offer. No others entitled to compete. This offer applies to both the $1.00 and $1.50 editions. No professional artists eligible to this contest.

Remit to-day, as this offer may be withdrawn at any time, or send for free descriptive circular.

Harvard Text Book Corporation

Harvard Building, cor. 6th Ave. and 42d St., N.Y. City

Remit by express, post-office money order, or registered letter. We cannot accept checks or postage stamps.

A Magnificent Library of Fifty Volumes of the World's Standard Works

SENT FREE OF ALL CHARGES FOR EXAMINATION

This is one of the grandest collections of the best works of the world's famous novelists. Each of the 50 volumes in this grand library is a complete story by a famous writer whose name will live as long as English literature. The make-up of the volumes is in every way worthy of their contents. The paper is of a selected quality; the binding a rich, dark red-ribbed silk cloth, with titles and authors' names heavily stamped in gold. The size of each book is 5½ x 7½ inches.

ONLY A FEW SETS LEFT

This is the last opportunity—it must be first come, first served. Our Special Limited Edition of the World's Famous Works of Fiction was printed in the summer months to retain our skilled labor and keep our presses busy. This is how we can sell a Splendid Library of 50 volumes at a price Slightly in Advance of Cost. The Edition is Now Practically Exhausted, and it is impossible to print a second edition at this price.

YOU TAKE NO RISK We prove the worth of this Library. We send the entire set, all transportation charges prepaid, and let you examine the books in your home. If you find them as represented, you pay in easy monthly payments. If you do not like the books, you return them at our expense.

THIS IS A FULL LIST OF THE FAMOUS WORKS:

Marie Corelli
Vendetta
A Romance of Two Worlds

A. Conan Doyle
The White Company
The Sherlock Holmes Stories
The Sign of the Four
A Study in Scarlet
Beyond the City

William Black
A Princess of Thule
Donald Ross of Helmsra
The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton
That Beautiful Wretch

Edgar Allan Poe
Poe's Detective Tales

H. Rider Haggard
Dawn
Cleopatra
The Witch's Head
Jess

S. Baring-Gould
In the Roar of the Sea
The Red Spider

Mary J. Holmes
Meadowbrook
Lena Rivers
Tempest and Sunshine

Rose Nouchette Carey
Averil
For Lillias

Grant Allen
What's Bred in the Bone
In All Shades

Thomas Hardy
The Woodlanders
Pair of Blue Eyes
E. D. E. N. Southworth

The Hidden Hand
Capitola's Peril

Winkle Collins
The Dead Secret
Evil Genius
The Moonstone

F. Ansley
Vice Versa

"The Duchess"
Phyllis

Ralph Connor
Black Rock
J. M. Barrie
The Little Minister

R. D. Blackmore
Lorna Doone

"Ouida"
Under Two Flags
Wanda Tricorin
Othmar
Moths

Edne Lyall
In the Golden Days
We Two Demoran
A Hardy Norseman
Won by Waiting

Hall Caine
Shadow of a Crime
The Roadman

STREET & SMITH, PUBLISHERS, (Established 1855) NEW YORK

TERMS:

After examining the books send us your decision. If you conclude to keep them, the total cost will be $19.50 for the 50 volumes, payable 50 cents upon the acceptance of the books, and $1 a month thereafter until paid for in full.

STREET & SMITH, NEW YORK CITY.—Please send me, on three days' approval, delivery charges prepaid, your LIBRARY OF SELECT FICTION in 50 volumes. If retained I agree to pay for same according to the terms of this advertisement. If not satisfactory, I will return the books within three days, at your expense. B. C. 11A.

Name.....

Town.....State.....

GOOD ONLY FOR UNITED STATES.

GET MORE SALARY

Would you like to succeed in business, to get a bigger salary or a better position? To possess the capacity that commands vast enterprises? Mr. Edward Chapman, of 404 E. 4th St., London, Ind., largely increased his salary after taking our course. You can also, if you write for our free book, "HOW TO SUCCEED IN BUSINESS" an extensive treatise on bookkeeping and business. It tells how you can make more money and better your position and explains our guarantees offering enabling you to quickly learn bookkeeping, etc., at home in spare time, without having to pay a cent for tuition fees until we have placed you in a paying position. If you want a better position and increased salary, write to-day for the book, Commercial Correspondence Schools, 22 E. School Building, Rochester, N. Y. We teach Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Typewriting, Business Arithmetic, Rapid Calculation, Commercial Law, Penmanship, Banking and Business Customs.

We Teach
You FREE:
We Secure
A Position
For You.

PROF-ITABLE

PUBLICITY

We successfully teach Journalism, Story-Writing, Illustrating, and Proofreading, by mail. This work is equally adaptable for men and women, and much of it can be done in the privacy of the home. If you will name the course in which you are interested, we will mail you the free booklet fully describing that course, and what the students are achieving. Our free booklet, "Rules of Manuscript sales and Syndicate Deals," tells how we sell $25.00 commission to exclusive publishers or to nearly 4,000 publishers by our syndicate plan; how we criticize, revise, and prepare MSS. THORNTON WEST, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF; FOUNDED 1895. NATIONAL PRESS BLDG., 68 The Baldwin, INDIANAPOLIS

SHORTHAND

You can easily learn the standard Pitman system at home, at a small cost, with the aid of my SIMPLIFIED CORRESPONDENCE COURSE. Send for free book!
Prof. G. Francis Hoagland, 217 President St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

JOURNALISM
Practical, profitable newspaper work, writing short stories, magazine articles, etc.

TAUGHT BY MAIL
by our successful system in personal charge of Mr. Henry Litchfield West, formerly managing editor of the Washington Post. Successful students everywhere. Write for illustrated booklet on Journalism.
NATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE INSTITUTE,
28-48 Second National Bank Bldg.
Washington, D. C.

Be a Writer

Our authors are actual successes. We start them right. Send for our "Editor's Special Offer." Manuscripts revised. NOT A SCHOOL.

WRITERS' AID ASSOCIATION, 150 Nassau St., New York

IF YOU ARE A WRITER

We can aid you to find a market for anything you write.

MSS. SUCCESSFULLY PLACED.

Criticized, Revised, Typewritten.

References: Edwin Markham, Margaret E. Sangster, and others. Established 1890. Send for leaflet E.

UNITED LITERARY PRESS NEW YORK.

100 different Foreign STAMPS FREE to new customers applying for our free approval sheets at 50 p. c. com. and enclosing 25c. postage. 148 varieties, including Serbia, 10c. Large Price List Free. NEW ENGLAND STAMP CO., 25, Bromfield Street, Boston 500 FOREIGN STAMPS, 10c. 104 var. from Malta, Bulgaria, etc. 10c. 200 var. 25c. 300 var. 40c. 500 var. $1.25. 1000 var. $4.75. 40 var. U. S. 10c. 32-page list free. Agents wanted. Stamps on approval at 50 per cent.

K. Crowell Stamp Co. 514 Canton Bldg. Cleveland, O.

$10.00 FOR A CENT!!!
GET POSTED! Don't let valuable coins slip through your fingers. Send 1c. for our new HUB COIN BOOK, which gives valuable information, descriptions, and prices guaranteed to pay for RARE COINS. Some are worth as much as $400 each.

Beautifully illustrated and bound edition. H. ALEXANDER & CO. (Established 1877). 214 C Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

WRITERS

who have made use of our services and the services of others whose business it is to edit, review and market manuscripts, say our methods are best and our terms most reasonable. We would be pleased to send any writer, amateur or professional, a copy of our free booklet on request. A postal card will do. Address

UNITED PRESS SYNDICATE
618 Majestic Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

MONEY

won't buy it—but we will send "Free" to any address, our "Booklet" which shows how to

Safely Invest Your Earnings and Get Large Profits from Small Investments

IT MAY SAVE YOU A LOSS OR MAKE YOUR FORTUNE

STOCK GUARANTY & SURETY CO.

Dept. N., 1122 Market St., San Francisco, Calif.
Agents wanted in every City and Town.

Malta-Vita

GIFT DISTRIBUTION

"No Work, No Heat; Just Cream, Then Eat." MALTA-VITA, the delicious, malted, baked, cooked, and toasted whole wheat food, purest and most nutritious, always ready to serve.

SAVE THE COUPONS

To all packages of

Malta-Vita

And get a

$365.00 KIMBALL PIANO, HIGH-GRADE GOLD-FILLED
WATCH, ENAMELED EIGHT-DAY MANTEL CLOCK

A 1 standard plate knives, forks, sugar shells, butter knives, spoons all sizes, also fountain pens. Full particulars on the coupons in each package. Do not miss this opportunity of securing valuable premiums free. For sale by all first-class grocers.

The Black Cat

A Monthly Magazine of Original Short Stories.

Copyright, 1903, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

Vol. IX., No. 2.

Whole No., 98.

NOVEMBER, 1903.

5 cents a copy.

50 cents a year.

Entered at the Post-Office at Boston, Mass., as second-class matter.

THE BLACK CAT is devoted exclusively to original, unusual, fascinating stories—every number is complete in itself. It publishes no serials, translations, borrowings, or stealings. It pays nothing for the name or reputation of a writer, but the highest price on record for Stories that are Stories, and it pays not according to length, but according to strength. To receive attention, manuscripts must be sent unrolled, fully prepaid, and accompanied by addressed and stamped envelope for return. All MSS. are received and returned at their writers' risk.

CAUTION.—The entire contents of THE BLACK CAT are protected by copyright, and publishers everywhere are cautioned against reproducing any of the stories, either wholly or in part.

The Green Gamp.*

BY F. E. CHASE.

N fifty-eight years the establishment of J. Hicks, licensed Pawnbroker, had suffered many changes, generally for the worse. Its neighborhood had degenerated from smart respectability to unabashed seediness. The once dignified reserve of its curtained windows—Hicks had been a banker by proclamation in the beginning—had given place to the cheap allurements of unredeemed pledges, frankly offered for sale. Within, dirt and decay had made their home in every corner of its neglected premises. One thing alone had changed for the better. Hicks himself had been modulated by the great composer, Time, from a particularly vulgar, self-assertive young man of twenty into a veteran of a singular gentleness and benignity of aspect, largely due, it must be owned, to a patriarchal beard, the most successful advertising medium the business had ever known. Seen through its highly refracting medium, as through a magnifying glass, the smallest advances seemed munificent, and the most usurious rates of interest loomed up as benefactions through its deceptive mist.

* Copyright, 1903, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

* The writer of this story received a cash prize of $200 in THE BLACK CAT story contest ending February 26, 1902.

In fifty-eight years many things had come into the little shop and gone again. Love and joy and death and bitterness, and pledges innumerable, waning with the years from the dignity of watches and wedding rings to the degradation of flat-irons and the bed blankets. A wife had been given into his care for a season, at some crisis of Providential unthrift, but had been redeemed again in due time, and taken out of his stricken hands. A son had come to him in the way of life's business. A bad loan, this, and one that had cost him dear. Yet, now that he too was gone, the father would have made an even more liberal advance to have him back. And it had somehow gradually come about, through some resultant twist in the old man's mind, that, in a general way, he preferred his pledges to his money, that he relinquished them often with manifest regret, and that certain immemorial items of collateral upon his shelves, representing money hopelessly lost to him, had become nevertheless the source of profound satisfaction.

Such was No. 831 as it stood entered upon his books.

Commercially regarded, No. 831 was a green silk umbrella with a heavy metal handle of considerable intrinsic value; sentimentally, it stood for Hicks' oldest and dearest friend; psychologically, it supplied him, other motives being lacking, with something to live for.

Its history was a simple one, but of quite exceptional interest.

It had been pawned one morning in the early years of his business life by a respectable elderly gentleman, who, after some haggling, accepted for it the sum of four dollars. With this sum and the customary ticket, he went out of Hicks' establishment, and was never again seen there or elsewhere.

Nearly a year from the date of this transaction, and just before the expiration of the term of the loan, a young man had turned up, and had inquired with evident anxiety regarding the pledged umbrella. His description was accurate, and Hicks had no difficulty in identifying the article, and no reason for denying its possession.

"It is most important," said the young man, "for — for family reasons, that this article be redeemed. There is no objection, I presume, to my paying the loan and interest, on behalf of my — my relative, and taking the property out of your hands."

"None whatever," said Hicks, "provided you have the ticket."

"Surely that is unimportant," urged the stranger, "so that you get your money. Suppose we say double the amount, by way of penalty for my carelessness in having lost the ticket."

"That won't do," said the broker. "Supposing it turned up?"

"But it can't turn up," said the young man earnestly. "It is at the bottom of the sea with the man to whom you gave it."

"How can you prove that to me?" said Hicks. "No, no, my friend, I must have my ticket."

"But the thing is worthless—I will pay you ten times the loan to safeguard you against any claim—twenty times! Good God!" he cried excitedly. "I must have it, man; more depends upon it than you know."

But Hicks was obdurate, and the stranger, after having exhausted his stock of argument, entreaty and pecuniary temptation, finally went away.

When he had gone, the broker took down the umbrella from its shelf and examined it with a new interest. It was an excellent umbrella, solidly respectable as to handle and stoutly serviceable as to fabric, yet scarcely deserving the valuation the young man had put upon it. Doubtless its value was sentimental merely; and yet—the claimant had been strangely eager. There was some mystery about it. Well, in thirty days it might be solved, for if, as the young man had said, its owner and the ticket were both at the bottom of the sea, the umbrella would become his when the loan matured.

But the matter turned out by no means so simply. Two days before the loan matured, the young man returned, clearly fortified with a better knowledge of the business and of his powers and privileges, paid the interest on the loan for another year, and thus renewed the matter for that period. Hicks accepted the money with an odd sense of defeat and discomfiture, and when his visitor had gone away with his receipt, he again took down the umbrella, spread it, and seating himself beneath its superfluous shade, pondered deeply upon its mystery, but to no sort of satisfactory result.

"At least," he said to himself as he closed and replaced it, "possession is nine points, even if he has scored one."

In twelve months more, just as Hicks' imagination was beginning to hover in close circles about his mysterious pledge, the young man again returned and renewed the loan as before, after again trying vainly to negotiate its surrender. In another twelve-month the same performance took place, and again at the fourth and fifth anniversaries of the transaction. Each year Hicks' visitor looked thinner and more careworn, and his argument grew more languid and perfunctory; but if his pursuit was less eager it was not less persistent, and each annual recurrence of the date found him promptly on hand to protect his mysterious interests.

Between whiles the pawnbroker never saw him or heard from him, but there was scarcely a day that he did not think of him and of his pursuit, and scarcely a week that, in an ecstasy of baffled curiosity and greed — for to his inflamed imagination the simple gamp had become the key to treasures untold — he did not take down the article and re-examine it, rap it, sound it, rattle it, feel its fabric inch by inch, and, upon occasion, curse its silent secretiveness in good set terms.

Its metal head was large and heavy, solid, apparently, to all tests that he dared make, and cast or carved at the top into the semblance of a grotesque head with staring, deep-set eyes. Cut or otherwise invade the substance of stick or handle he dared not, as a matter of professional scruple; and finally, noting that his frequent handling was causing signs of wear, he was forced, for the same reason, to deny himself altogether the futile pleasure of touching it, save upon rare and eagerly anticipated occasions. But he hung it on the wall above his desk, and there it stood before him day by day, a beacon and a goal, a beckoning hand, a bow of promise. Twice he was sick to death, but they brought the umbrella to his bedside, and he straightway got well. He came back forlornly from his wife's newly made grave and sat down before his talisman, and was presently consoled. His son robbed and shamed him, but he knew a way to be heartened and uplifted. The infinite possibilities of the umbrella spread themselves above him and shielded him from the storm of circumstances.

Thus time went on, the young man still coming doggedly year after year, every season older and grayer, soon a middle-aged man, by and by an old man, older than his years, shabbier than once and feebler, but still unfailing in patience. He was always safely in time with his payment, but occasionally a little later than usual, because, perhaps, he had to journey far, or because money was scarce, and he had trouble to get even the poor sum needed to protect the pledge. Meanwhile the broker lived in a state of eager anticipation, the more controlling that it was utterly undefined. Each year was to him a crescendo of hope, ending in sharp disappointment. His life and its affairs went on merely as the left hand part or accompaniment to the air provided by the disputed umbrella.

Thus more than half a century went by, and as the fifty-eighth anniversary of what had now come to be the chief event of his life approached, Hicks felt a livelier hope than usual stir within him. His annual visitor had seemed unusually feeble at the time of his last visit, and the chance that he could have survived appeared comfortingly remote. A conviction that at length the mystery of so many years would be somehow revealed to him penetrated the old pawnbroker's mind, and as the critical date approached, he felt an almost youthful eagerness of anticipation. As a rule his visitor had turned up a day or two earlier than was necessary, but this year he had not appeared on the morning of the final day.

By the terms of the loan the owner's rights expired at noon, and as that hour approached, Hicks took down the umbrella with an unsteady hand and deliberated upon a plan of investigation. He had amply provided himself with tools, and only awaited liberty to use them.

One ! Two ! Three ! Four ! Five ! Six ! Seven ! Eight ! Nine ! Ten ! Eleven ! Twelve !

Hicks had selected a cold chisel from his lay-out, and was poising a hammer to strike, when a shadow fell upon his desk, and a familiar voice said:

"Yes, you've beaten. I haven't the price. I've tried hard, but when one hasn't money to pay for food, even bigger things must go."

Hicks paused in his work and looked at his visitor. He was pale and emaciated, and could hardly stand from weakness. What little life was left him burned in his eyes, with which he eagerly devoured the article the two had so long contended for.

"Let me show you," he said. "There is an easier way."

He took the umbrella from Hicks and, inserting an awl in one eye of the carved face on the umbrella head, with this leverage easily unscrewed the top, to the pawnbroker's amazement and disgust. The cavity thus discovered contained only a piece of folded paper, yellow with age. Upon this Hicks pounced with a kind of whine of animal greed and satisfaction.

But the stranger's hand fell upon his with an energy of which his feeble body scarcely seemed capable.

"Don't touch it!" he cried. "For God's sake don't. It is nothing — nothing to you; to me it is so much. No," he urged, as Hicks strove to withdraw his prize. "Not yet, at any rate. Not until you have heard my story."

He sank into a chair, his hand still grasping Hicks' wrist, and went on passionately:

"It belonged to her father — this umbrella. He was my employer, and a rich man; and I loved his daughter, and she loved me. But he found it out, and forbade me his house — forbade me to think of her. But I wouldn't give her up, and she wouldn't give me up, and so we used to write one another every day, and send the letters back and forth in this umbrella handle. The old man always carried it, wet or dry, and I used to watch my chance during the day and unscrew the top while he was out of the office, and put in my letter, and she did the same at home. It seemed a great joke then to make him our postman. Good God! What a joke it turned out."

Hicks slowly withdrew his hand, leaving the yellow paper between them on the desk.

"Business went wrong," continued the stranger after a pause. "The old man got involved worse and worse, tried the wrong way out of it, and had to skip. He realized on everything he had — even this, as it turned out — and left between two days, taking her with him. They sailed for South America on the Ginevra — you remember — she was never heard from — never even spoken. And never a word from her — it was all so sudden — I knew that — but something might have been done — I couldn't understand.

I guess I went pretty near out of my mind. My body just went round without me, somehow, for months, doing the old things without my knowing anything about it, when all at once I thought of the old 'umbrella route,' as we used to call it. It was a chance. Perhaps she didn't have any other. All their things had been scattered by sale, but I hunted and hunted. There were a hundred chances that he had taken it with him, but I took the one that he hadn't. By and by I thought of the pawn shops, and went the rounds. I guess yours was about the last, and when I got my eyes on the old thing, it was like coming home. But the ticket stuck me, and I couldn't tell my story to such a man as you were then. You've changed a good deal in fifty-eight years."

He paused, and looked longingly at the letter.

"That's what I wanted. I knew it was there. Her last letter to me. The last one she ever wrote. It made me wild at first to think that if I could only get my hands on the thing for a minute, I could have it out. But you never let me touch it. What'd you think it was — money?"

Hicks nodded.

"Money!" cried the other. "I've wanted money pretty bad, but never the way I wanted that letter. But I couldn't seem to tell at first, and by and by, when I got to know it was there, waitin' for me, it didn't seem to matter much, so that I could keep it safe. And I have!" he cried. "And here it is."

"Fifty-eight years," exclaimed Hicks. "You damned old fool! Why didn't you tell me this fifty-eight years ago?"

And pushing the letter toward his companion, he turned away.

With a little weak moan of satisfaction the stranger seized the paper and carefully opened it.

It may have been five minutes before the old pawnbroker ventured to turn and look at him.

He sat just as he had left him, huddled together in his chair, the letter in his hand, his chin on his breast — dead.

Saint Devil.*

BY SARAH COMSTOCK.

WHEN the yacht La Paloma fluttered into sight, Padre Diego crossed himself.

"Why do you do so?" asked old Padre Juan.

"I do not know," replied the young priest, but he made the sign twice more.

The two Franciscans were standing together in the Mission's outer corridor. They used to go there every evening to watch the sun when, hanging in Santa Barbara's sky, it was gulped all at once by the sudden southern night.

Just as it flashed for the last time the slender yacht slipped into harbor.

"She glides in gently, like a white dove of peace," said Padre Juan.

"She creeps in stilly and surely, like an evil thought into the heart," said Padre Diego.

His eyes were strained toward the vessel. The muscles of his strong face and lithe body were tense. With his straight, black brows drawn to meeting, he gazed sombrely upon the yacht.

"I cannot tell how," he said, "but I know that there is evil hidden under those pure white sails."

"Then the Lord will guard us," said the elder priest. He formed a cross with thumb and forefinger as he uttered the words of the Santiguase. Then, "En el nombre del Padre."

"Y del Hijo," continued the other.

"Y del Espirito Santo."

"Amen," chanted the old and the young voices together, and together the lumbering old knees and the supple young ones bent in prayer.

When the two arose night had set in.

"Look!" cried Padre Diego, pointing to where the yacht had dropped anchor. A shadow had fallen upon the sails and blackened them and she lay still upon the water.

* Copyright, 1903, by The Short-story Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

"See, she hovers, black and ominous as a raven," said he, turning away with a shudder.

Idling, gossiping, summering Santa Barbara was given something new to twitter about next day.

A yacht named La Paloma had arrived from unknown parts, bearing unknown people. The inmates of the Hotel Darlington assembled on its veranda and discussed.

"It's a wedding trip, I know," asserted the girl who looked like a bit of Dresden china. "I met her on the street to-day, and it was plain at a glance that everything she wore was brand new from hat to heels."

"What sort of a looking man is he?" asked the girl with the Yankee-keen eyes.

"No man has been seen; she has been walking alone all day."

"Then that finishes the wedding-trip hypothesis," said the businesslike Yankee girl, making a mental note of the fact.

"Nonsense — that strengthens it," snapped a hanger-on named Wilshire. It was an ill-judged remark, for everybody surmised that he had been refused by Alice Neal.

"No; for it's as soon as men begin to know us that we have to hold them so tightly," put in Miss Neal with a generosity which confirmed the report of the refusal.

"Married or not, the woman's a saint," said Dr. Poultney. "Never saw such a face outside a picture. Looks like Cecilia. When I met her on the beach I had a notion that if I rubbed my glasses I could see the halo."

"That's true, Dr. Poultney," said Alice Neal. "If she ever comes near the hotel we girls might as well flee before we are routed. There she is now. Come on, girls."

A chorus of protests from the men stopped her. She turned back and, with the others, watched the white figure coming up the dusty street.

It was in one of the comments made as the stranger passed the hotel then that someone spoke of her as the Saint Woman and the name clung until she left Santa Barbara. It was Poultney, I believe, who called her that. And it was he who afterwards named her Saint Devil, and that name has clung, even to this day.

Any of that summer's crowd at the Hotel will tell you that they always remember her as she looked that afternoon when she passed, and they, assembled, watched her. She made a curious impression upon even the most unimaginative of them—an impression of unreality. The day was hot and the streets dusty and everyone else coming in from so much as a block's walk looked grimy and moist; but she was as spotless, as fresh and cool in her white gown as if she had not touched the earth at all, but had somehow sailed over its earthiness. Young and slight and pale she was, without a touch of color except in the yellow of her hair and in her eyes.

"The eyes were blue," insisted the arrogant professor, in one of the later discussions. He was near-sighted and he had never met her face to face but once. Still, he insisted. "They were blue and simple and pretty like any baby's."

"You are surely mistaken, Professor," urged a Greek-letter man from Stanford. The Saint Woman had once stopped him on the street to ask him the best way to the Mission. "Her eyes were black and cunning," he said.

"I know them to be treacherous and green, like a cat's," announced a man who had once shaken hands with the President at a stand-up reception and always afterwards spoke of him as "a good fellow." He never had been known to have anything to do with the Saint Woman, but he liked to hobnob with celebrities in his conversation.

"Her eyes always had that same catty look," he asserted.

"They were opals," said Poultney quietly. "They held all colors and once I saw them burn red and translucent like a ruby. That was when one of her servants made her angry by disobedience. He didn't disobey long."

What Poultney said settled it. He was the only one who had ever been aboard La Paloma, who had ever talked with the Saint Woman. This was when he had been summoned one day to attend a sick servant, and the information he brought back concerning the vessel and its people was about all that Santa Barbara ever possessed.

It seemed that the Saint Woman herself was the only passenger. Her servants and crew consisted of South Pacific natives; one of these was sailing master and his wife acted as stewardess. They spoke only their native tongue, in which their mistress addressed them. None left the yacht, except for supplies.

Piecing together a few allusions which the doctor heard and their own ever-ready fictions, those interested finally agreed that the woman was a widow or an orphan from some colonized island in the South Seas and that she was heir to large wealth which enabled her to travel in luxurious fashion. Altogether, this is a good enough theory, as it is easily borne out by the data, and if it be wrong nobody will ever know the difference.

"There's something queer about the whole concern," said Poulteney. "The woman's lonely way of travelling is odd. And she is odd. Never saw such queer eyes in my life — the way they change and the way they look through you.

"Funny thing happened while I was out there. I wanted cold water to dissolve some pellets in and I told her so. She rang for a servant and when the man came I swear that all she did was to look at him — never said a word nor made a motion. Just one quick look, and off he walked and brought the water."

She was on shore herself every day, but she made no acquaintances. Her wanderings always wound up at the Mission, where she would spend hours in the relic room, carelessly turning over the pages of old monastic volumes, or in the chapel, where she would sit quietly watching the gleams of sunlight that flickered over the cold walls, or in the corridor, idly strolling up and down.

Old Padre Juan tells me that this had been going on for a week before Padre Diego met her. Nobody else can remember exactly, but Padre Juan must be right, for he it was who knew and loved best the young priest. Padre Juan has been very different since it all happened — his chin droops wearily against his cassock, and there is never an afternoon that he may not be found walking lonely in the petunia garden where is built a row of monks' cells, narrow and deep in the ground. He will be given one of these cells before long and he looks at them as if he would be glad to come.

It was there that Padre Diego came upon her. Another priest had unlocked the door for her, as is usual in showing visitors the Mission, and then, being called away, he had summoned Padre Diego to take his place and lock the door after she had gone.

"A tourist," was what he had been told. Tourists were very much alike and they did not interest him and he was thinking of other things when he stepped out from the chapel into the burying ground, swinging the chain of keys with the surplus of nervous vigor that the monastery walls cramped and fretted. He restlessly jingled them against the wall as he walked. Even the brown cassock could not hide his wiry physique, which had not yet learned the stoop that comes under the hood. His cropped head was erect, well-poised, rugged. It looked like a fine work in marble that has not yet been chiselled to a nicety.

He was impatient in soul at having to show a tourist about. But when he stepped out from the chapel and came upon her he thought that a vision had been vouchsafed him.

Frail enough to be not of this world, beautiful enough to be of a better, she looked. The garden of graves itself was more human than she. Its sod was warm, its air was vivid, its petunias glowed in a mass of summer reds. But she was white, all white; white of face, of hand, of gown; she was so slight that she might disappear like a breeze; she was so rapt as she gazed upon a grave that there seemed no longer any real world in her consciousness.

He was afraid to move lest he disturb her.

She spoke at last without looking toward him. She had not once done so, yet she seemed to see.

"Tell me," she said, "how you, so young and vigorous and full of the power and love of life can cramp your power within these walls."

He was startled at her seeing him without looking, and he did not answer. She lifted her opal eyes and turned them full upon his.

As she did so there came over him the same dread as on the evening when he had first seen her yacht. He made the sign of the cross. Again and again he made it, but his eyes were not upon heaven. They were fastened to hers, which held them and would not let go. She reached out a cold hand and touched his, never relaxing her gaze.

"Tell me," she whispered, "do you never want to go away? You who know the world so well? You know how big and beautiful it is. I love to sail over it in my boat. Do you never want to go?"

He was conscious of a feeling like that of a nightmare — a dread of he knew not what, of a force he could not grapple with. He fluttered like a bird under a snake's gaze and at last, with a terrific effort, he wrenched away his eyes and fled to the chapel. There, before the dim altar, he fell upon his knees and prayed as he had never prayed against the world or the flesh.

"Deliver me from the Devil," he groaned.

The woman showed no surprise. She passed softly behind him through the chapel and walked down the hill to her boat.

Through the days that followed a cloud hung over Padre Diego. He ate and slept little, not, apparently, because he was sick, but because his mind was preoccupied.

"What ails him?" asked the Prefect several times.

"I do not know," Padre Juan would reply. But he slipped a bead at each time he said it in a misgiving whether he had lied. For though Padre Diego did not speak openly, he threw out a two and two from which his friend could construct four.

"Brother, does the Devil wear woman's form?" he asked once.

"No, no," in a reassuring tone, as to a troubled child. "No doubt woman is temptation enough of herself."

"But I am sure I have seen the Devil look out from a woman's eyes."

"Brood not upon such thoughts. You strengthen them by doing so. Use the great power of your mind to drive them away rather than to turn them against yourself."

This was the warning which Padre Diego should have heeded and did not.

The next time she came was on a Sunday. Morning mass was being said in the historic chapel, which the devout and the curious crowded. The soft glow of many candles shed light upon the rich adornment of images and painting and embroidery that had found their way to California with the first Spanish Fathers. Incense hung in the warm air, stiflingly sweet. The slow chanting of solemn voices sounded down the aisles and in response rose one, young and strong and beautiful.

"That is Padre Diego's voice," whispered a resident to a tourist.

"Ah, he is the one who started out in life as an opera singer?"

"Yes — sang and won fame in the opera of Madrid, then gave up the whole thing for a fanatical whim."

"Lucky you of Santa Barbara!"

Higher and clearer rang out the voice. It was chanting alone a long response and the face of the priest was toward the altar. Eyes as well as ears were bent upon him, as if they, too, drank in the sound.

Up, up rose the voice toward his high note, his famous note, for the sake of which music, as sung in cathedrals all over the world, had been rewritten. Up, up! Then there happened what had never happened before in all his services.

The voice wavered, trembled, like one staggering on a dizzy cliff-edge, and then it gave out.

The singer wheeled slowly and faced the congregation, but he was not looking at them. His eyes were fixed beyond them, and mechanically the people turned and followed his gaze.

The Saint Woman had entered unobserved. She stood white and silent against the wall, her eyes holding those of the priest.

When the people turned she dropped her gaze and walked quietly forward to a seat. The on-lookers gained the impression that she had just entered and had paused there only for the moment. Her manner was unconscious and might have warded off a climax. But when she let go Padre Diego's eyes he stood dumb for an instant. Then, as if rousing himself from a sleep, he gathered his forces and swept his eyes over the whole assembly.

"People of Santa Barbara," he cried in the voice of a prophet, "the Evil One is among us. Let us pray together for the salvation of all our souls."

Then he fell on his knees and the awe-stricken people did likewise, and he prayed in a way that never will be forgotten by those who heard.

The Saint Woman knelt and looked the most devout of all.

That was the last time that she was seen by the citizens. She was not known to go to the Mission again and she ceased her lonely strolls through the town. The yacht still lay in harbor and a servant appeared in the shops one day to lay in a great supply of goods. He did his buying by means of signs, and when the Stanford boy asked him about his mistress he only stared.

People could not agree as to what the priest's warning had meant. Some were sure that he referred directly to the Saint Woman; they had always thought there was something queer about her, anyway, and wasn't it plain that he had been looking directly at her before he uttered his strange words? Others said that he must have had a revelation from within and have seen what no one else did. As to the Evil One to whom he referred being the Saint Woman, that was absurd. Didn't everyone remember how she joined in the prayer?

As for the priest, his days were passed in fasting, his nights in prayer. He tossed so many nights through that at last he staggered and literally fell asleep during matins, and after that he wore a cruel rope against his flesh in penance.

Padre Juan, who read his heart, remonstrated with him.

"You are full of idle fancies," the old priest protested. "Sleep and eat more, and think upon holy rather than evil things. Do not try so consciously to resist evil—resist by ignoring. You are a strong man, with a strong will, and you are using that power of yours to arm evil against yourself. It will gain greater power over you than if you were weaker."

Again the same warning fell upon unheeding ears.

"May the Holy Virgin grant that I see the woman no more," Padre Diego implored. "Once more, and I could not resist."

"Resist what, Brother? Can it be human love that you are struggling with?"

The young priest burst forth excitedly, almost indignantly. "No," he cried, "it is not love. I never felt any impulse of love for her. It is hate, rather. But there is something compelling about the woman that I have all the time been contending with, and I cannot contend longer. My strength is giving out."

"But you have seen her only twice, is it not so?"

"No, no, this is not the first of it. It began long, long ago."

He sat for a little while in a despairing silence and the old man waited and let him take his time in the telling.

"It was back in the time when I was given over to worldly ambition — when I was singing in the opera of Madrid. My success, as the world terms it, was great; and my whole soul was in my art. Young as I was I had reached almost the top of my profession when I gave it up.

“I have never told you exactly how it all came about. It was in this way:

“I was, that last season, singing leading tenor rôles. My impresario was indulging me, older men were imitating me, Madrid was petting me. Then my voice gave out.”

The old priest started. “What is this, my Brother?” he said. “Then did you join the church in the bitterness of worldly failure? I have always believed that in the height of success you voluntarily made the sacrifice.” His shrunken old lips twitched with the pain of disappointment.

“No, it was voluntary. I did make the sacrifice, prompted by a strange circumstance. Hear me through.

“One night I was singing my famous solo in which the music had been altered to reach my high note, the same that you know. Just as I came to it I felt an irresistible impulse to look toward a box on the left side of the house. My eyes swerved toward it and there I met the gaze of the woman. I know now that she is the same. I knew it that first day in the cemetery as soon as she lifted those eyes and I saw them.

“My voice did not break then in the opera, but I finished the performance stupidly. The next night the same thing happened and for several nights. All the time I felt a strange trouble and dread whenever this woman crossed my thoughts or met my eyes. I had no idea who she was nor did I try to find out. She repelled me in spite of her beauty. But I had to admit to myself her power, although I was loath to do so.

“All the time my dread was growing stronger. I believed that the Evil One was haunting me. She came to the opera every night and I always knew when she entered, no matter where I was looking.

“In the end my resistance failed. Night after night I kept my eyes determinedly away from her box, while I felt all the while that she was trying to draw my glance. I did not know what she wanted, I did not know what I feared, but my dread was as black as any nightmare, while as vague. It was like the dread of going to sleep that I used to feel when a little child — the sensation of yielding up my own conscious will.

"At last, one festival night, the crash came. My eyes turned, my will grew limp, my voice gave way. The curtain was rung down, people pitied or condemned and in either case demanded their money back.

"My impresario was indulgent as ever and coaxed me to take a rest and so repair my voice. But I had already been considering the renunciation of my art, and this determined me.

"I felt that evil was with me. I felt that I was being warned and I wanted to give up the world and give my life to religion. The thought had been growing day by day and I knew that I should ignore it no longer.

"So, in spite of the pleadings of my impresario and my friends, I entered a Spanish monastery."

The old priest sighed relief. This young brother, almost a son to him, had then made the sacrifice after all.

The younger had evidently told his story. "I cannot resist again," was all he said further, and with a gesture of despair he sank into a seat and the fog of thought once more settled over him.

It was nearly supper time, but he did not leave his seat in the inner corridor. Padre Juan went, and urged him to follow. He did not stir. He told someone who spoke to him that he did not care for food, and he sat on there until summoned to his few nightly duties. When they were finished he went back to the inner corridor and paced there slowly, watching the sky blacken and the stars come out above the sacred enclosed garden of the Mission where, by ancient rule, no woman is permitted to set foot.

For hours he walked there, measuring over and over the quadrangle of the garden. His beads moved swiftly.

Near a corner of the garden rises the belfry. Its entrance is from the outer corridor and one of its arched openings commands the whole inner quadrangle and the sacred garden. Padre Diego glanced up there once and noticed the beauty of the moon's lights and shadows playing through the belfry arches.

Then he bowed his head again and paced on. Beauty was for the world he had left. Devotion was for him.

"Save me for Thy works," he murmured.

It was long after midnight and the last laugh from the town had died and the crickets were growing quiet. The beads were on their fourteenth journey. The monastery slept.

Of a sudden the rosary fell and the priest's hands dropped, limp. Slowly his head turned and twice he resisted the impulse of his glance. Then, with a force that he could not stop, it shot up to the belfry arch.

She stood there, the Saint Woman. She was always white, and the moonlight made her whiter. She was as still as marble, and her gleaming, compelling eyes never swerved from his but held them prisoners.

When she moved at last it was to beckon him. "No," he thought he shouted, but in truth he only whispered. She leaned forward slightly so that her words might go down to him.

"You shall come," she said softly. "You shall come away with me. Don't go through the buildings — that might waken someone. See, I have a rope here. Come to me this way."

She let down the rope and he saw her fastening it to a beam.

"I will not come," he tried to shout, but only croaked faintly.

She went on tying it with hands that he noticed were as strong as they looked frail. When she had done, she said:

"If you do not come to me I shall go down there for you."

Into the sacred garden! Never to be profaned by woman's foot!

"You shall not!" he whispered. "I will come and end this."

He spoke defiantly, but he half expected to see her smile a challenge. She did not, however. She calmly waited, her eyes following him.

He sprang to the rope and grasped it. It had been prepared for the purpose and was knotted at intervals.

Up, up. He was within the belfry.

"We will go down together now — down and away." She said it quite simply as if it had been understood from the first. "I have waited a long time for you to come of yourself, but you would not."

His eyes and her opal ones were fast.

"I will end this," he said savagely.

"No," she answered gently, "you are mine now. How long I sought you in the Madrid opera. Night after night I went there and made you notice me, and if you had stayed there I should have gained you in the end — I should have made my influence stronger until you would have left your art for me. But you escaped me then. You hid. I have followed and found you out at last, though, and you are mine."

Fiercely, madly, he struggled to struggle. That was all. In fact, he scarcely moved. He whispered, gasping:

"You are the Devil. It is godly to slay you. I will dash you down, down these stairs."

At the end his breath gave out and the words died away in the terrific fight he was making — the fight that strained muscle and nerve and showed him no more moving than a statue.

"Come down the stairs," she was saying.

When he reached them he tried to seize her and fling her down. But his hands were bound by something intangible.

All the time trying, vainly trying, he groped his way with her down the black, twirling flight. They passed from the glimmering moonlight that followed them and entered the darkness of the middle stairs that twisted themselves away from the light; the darkness swallowed them up for the distance of a few narrow winds, then out they came into the moonlight again. Her opal eyes once more met his and her cold hands touched him. He shivered away from her, but when she said in her purring voice, "This way," he followed.

On they ran, down the long road of white dust that leads to the sea. Her cold hand was always in his. At first he tried to drop it, but he could not, and at last he gave up and ceased to struggle, like a watcher overcome with sleep.

"Faster — we must hurry," she urged sweetly.

He obeyed tractably. They ran faster, faster.

A land wind bore a scent of petunias after them. He noticed it again and again, even as they reached the deck of the yacht, and felt the first flutter of its awakened sails. The scent of petunias was the last thing that meant the Mission to him.

It was the next day, when the yacht had disappeared and the talk had begun, that Dr. Poultney named her Saint Devil.

Miss Robin Hood.*

BY WILL B. WILDER.

OW far is it to Colonel Hunter's?" asked Abbott, as the stableman brought his horse around to the front of the country tavern where he had stopped off for supper.

"You goin' there?"

"Yes. How far is it?"

"About three miles. Say, boys, he's goin' by the Upper Road."

Abbott had vaulted into his saddle, but something in the groom's voice, and in the answering murmur of interest from "the boys," made him pause and look at them all. There were half a dozen loungers on the porch and at the open door, and Abbott noted that they all turned and looked at him, half curiously, half in slow, countrified amusement.

"What's the joke?" he demanded cheerfully.

"Oh, nothing." Then, after a pause, some one drawled, "Hope you won't meet Miss Robin Hood, that's all."

"Who is Miss Robin Hood?"

"Well, if you get any information on that subject, the sheriff'll be mighty glad to have you give him a pointer."

"A highwayman—a highwaywoman, do you mean?"

"Looks that way. Three hold-ups on the Upper Road this summer—by a woman—masked. Smart as the devil. Gets away every time. Sheriff's nearly crazy."

Abbott gathered up the reins and laughed.

"Lively lot of farmers you must be up here, to let a woman walk around you like that," he said. "I hope Miss Robin Hood is attending to business to-night. I'd like nothing better than to meet her."

* Copyright, 1903, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

* The writer of this story was awarded the $110 Fox Typewriter Prize in THE BLACK CAT story contest ending February 26, 1902.

He clattered away up the street, and the hotel loungers spat emphatically, and hoped, with varying degrees of profanity, that the coxcomb might have his wish.

Abbott rode on into the country, which lay beautifully mellow under the evening light. The road ran between prosperous-looking farms, turning, as country roads will, to skirt a pond or a hill, or to dip into a tree-grown hollow. It was a pleasant country this where Colonel Hunter had hired a house for the summer. Abbott was glad he had remembered the Colonel's invitation, given when they parted at Suez last spring, after a two months' intimacy on shipboard. Abbott had taken a fancy for the blustering, warm-hearted and warm-tempered Colonel. He remembered him very well, but for the life of him he could not remember what the Colonel had said about his family — except his daughter Kitty. There was no forgetting Kitty. Unconsciously Abbott slapped the reins on Beauty's neck. When a man is under thirty, and has been for four years on service as war correspondent in foreign lands, he has a right to feel his pulses jump at the thought of meeting one of his own fair countrywomen at home.

"Halt!"

The order rang so sharply across his thoughts that for a moment he was simply bewildered and did not obey. There was a flash, a report, and a pistol shot "across his bows" fanned the air against his cheek. He reined up abruptly, just as a dark pony and rider sprang from the bushes at his right and barred the road ahead of him.

"Hands up! Quick!"

He put up his hands without unnecessary delay. What he might have done if the order had come from a man doesn't matter. He could shoot from his hip if necessary, and there was a revolver in his pocket — but even a war correspondent is not inured to shooting slender, graceful women who ride like circus queens. Beyond a question, Miss Robin Hood had the advantage of him. So Abbott threw up his hands and wished nervously that she wouldn't fool with that pistol. It might go off!

"Keep your hands up and you won't get hurt," the highway-woman said, in a slow, sweet voice. "I am going through your pockets — but you will be covered all the time."

"Really, I'm afraid there isn't enough in my pockets to make it worth your while, madam," said Abbott apologetically. "If I had known I was to have the pleasure of meeting you, I should have been better prepared."

"Just keep your hands up, that's enough," said Miss Robin Hood, bringing her pony beside Abbott's horse by a dexterous touch.

She proceeded to go through his pockets with one hand with a quickness and system that set Abbott to speculating whether she could possibly have a husband. He hadn't supposed that women knew so well where men's pockets were disposed!

His revolver she took possession of, and slipped it into her own pocket. As he had said, he carried no valuables in his pockets — and she went no deeper.

But Abbott had been watching his chance, and as she leaned toward him in the search he suddenly seized her pistol hand, pistol and all, and with a trick clasp he had learned in the East he opened her strong brown fingers and her pistol was in his hand.

"Drop it," she said quietly — and he dropped it, for she was holding his own revolver against his breast.

"You are quick," he said, with genuine admiration.

"I aim to please," she said sweetly. "That's all this time, I think. Pardon me if I carry off this handsome pistol as a souvenir — and to save you from any temptation to use it."

She slipped to the ground, picked up the pistol which he had dropped, and remounted — all as lightly as a circus queen, he thought again. As she sprang up, the gray veil which had masked her face fell to one side and for a fleeting instant he had a glimpse of a smooth cheek and a round chin melting upward into the curve of smiling lips. Then the pony sprang across the road into the dusky bushes, and nothing remained of his experience — nothing save a ring which had slipped from her finger when he opened her hand with that Hindoo juggler's clasp. He examined it as well as he could in the fading light — an emerald, set with small diamonds.

"I'll keep this as my souvenir," he laughed, as he slipped it into a secret inner pocket.

Then he started the puzzled Beauty on a sharp trot and covered the remaining distance to Colonel Hunter's house rapidly. Once or twice he thought he heard a pony's feet beating the ground off to his left, and he wondered if by any possibility Miss Robin Hood could be trailing him — but he saw nothing.

Colonel Hunter welcomed him with enthusiasm.

"Well, well, well, my dear boy! You're as welcome as a newspaper to a man in the Arctic. Kitty and I have been boring each other to death in this dead and alive place — though Kitty gets what fun she can out of riding. She's out now, but she'll be back in time for dinner. Let me take you to your room. Jiminy, but I'm glad to have a man to talk to at last!"

As Abbott glanced from his window when his host had left him, a slim figure in a dark gray riding habit slipped past in the shadow of the lilac bushes and entered the house.

"Miss Kitty returned," he said to himself. Then he sat down on the edge of the bed and stared unseeingly at the sky for some minutes. The — the resemblance — was certainly — curious! But then — put half a dozen women into dark gray riding habits and set them against a background of dusk and low bushes, and probably they would all look more or less alike — probably they would all have that — that peculiar lissome grace of movement — though he'd be hanged if they would!

He hurried his dressing, but his hostess was already in the drawing-room when he came down, — a tall, graceful girl, with something in the outline of her figure strangely familiar.

"Papa has told me so much about you," she said in slow, sweet tones, holding out a firm brown hand frankly. "I hope you may not find it too dull here to make us a good long visit."

"I have struck nothing dull so far — quite the contrary," he answered cheerfully, watching where the round, saucy chin melted into the curve of her smiling lips. "You —" he paused an instant deliberately and repeated the pronoun — "you have already entertained me most delightfully."

"We aim to please," she said demurely, and dropped a teasing little courtesy.

Her voice, her words, her audacity in using them, made him stare. But she met his astonished look so simply and innocently that he fell back again with a gasp, and followed her into the dining-room in a dazed condition.

When Abbott went to his room that evening, he was the most puzzled man in the United States. His first flash of conviction had faded into irresolute doubt. There was a resemblance, certainly; but was it enough to argue identity? Her voice was not the same, though the slow, sweet manner of speech was similar. Had she disguised her voice in that first encounter? Or was he imagining the resemblance altogether? The line of cheek and chin seemed the same — but what did he know of girls, anyhow? Perhaps ten out of every hundred had that same round curve, if he should take note. Why should she do such a thing, anyhow? Could it be a bit of girlish mischief, inspired by the deadly dullness of life, and made possible because she knew how to ride and shoot? But he remembered the perfect breeding and dignity of the girl with whom he had dined, and then recalled the business-like manner in which Miss Robin Hood had gone through his pockets. That went beyond the bounds of innocent mischief. And had there not been other hold-ups? No, no, it was all impossible! He debated the question until he fell into a restless sleep in which he and the Colonel were exchanging shots on horseback, while Miss Kitty caught the bullets in mid-air on a conjuror's wand and turned them all into emerald rings.

But when he awoke and reviewed the situation, it was all too incredible, and he felt ashamed of himself for harboring his suspicions for a moment. He was still more ashamed half an hour later.

"Miss Robin Hood has been heard from again," Colonel Hunter said gleefully, as they came together before breakfast. "That woman is a caution, whoever she is."

"What has she done now?" Kitty asked in distressed tones, while Abbott turned and watched her face with anxious wonder.

"Held up old Farmer Gray last evening, just by that wooded bend in the road, shot his horse dead when he tried to get away, and robbed him of five hundred dollars he was going to pay off a mortgage with. Fairly ruined the poor old man."

"Oh, poor Mrs. Gray," cried Kitty. "She sells us our butter and eggs, and she is so nice." There were tears in her eyes as she raised them to Abbott — and he came to her side and bent to kiss her hand with old-fashioned formality.

"Bless you for your tender, womanly heart," he said, with such unexpected fervor that she colored beautifully and drew her hand away softly.

After that he let himself go. If there were still some curious facts which he could not understand, he simply put them out of his thoughts. His evidence might not have been enough for a court-room, but — was it to count for nothing that she had the most wonderful eyes and the most enchanting smile in the world? Then Nature's system of signalling was defective!

Colonel Hunter was an insistent host, and Abbott's visit lengthened into days and weeks. To preserve some appearance of independence, he had taken a room at the Hotel Grandon, but he used it less than the room which was now called his at Colonel Hunter's house. The truth of the matter was that his first doubt and wonder in regard to Kitty Hunter had given way to another — equally disquieting to him, but less unnatural — namely, to a wonder and doubt whether by any possibility she could be induced to care for him! In truth, he had fallen in love — fallen fast and far.

One day it occurred to him that he had never told his hosts of his own adventure with the mysterious highwaywoman, and as he dressed for dinner he slipped the emerald upon his finger to illustrate his story with it. But as it happened he didn't tell the story, for, before a chance came to bring it in, Colonel Hunter got started somehow on the subject of jewels, and interrupted an account of some odd things he had found in the Orient to say to his daughter:

"By the way, Kitty, why don't you wear that emerald I gave you any more?"

Kitty did not lift her eyes from her plate as she answered — after a pause that sent all the blood in Abbott's body to his heart —

"I haven't it with me up here."

"Haven't? Where in the world did you leave it?"

Again Kitty paused before she answered, with a poor attempt at lightness:

"Oh, it is in safe hands, you may be sure!"

Her father looked at her sharply, and resumed his soup and his conversation. But several times he broke off what he was saying to glance at her with that same look of doubt and suspicion. At last his face cleared and he exclaimed heartily :

"Say, Kitty, you're mistaken about not having that emerald with you. I distinctly remember that you were wearing it that day when Dr. Barclay came up from town, because he examined it. That was only a day or two before Abbott came."

Kitty had turned singularly pale. "Yes, I remember now," she said slowly. "You are right about that."

"You have mislaid it, careless child, and never missed it," cried her father with a loud laugh. "Wait till I give you another ring, my girl !"

Kitty laughed nervously and lifted her eyes to Abbott, who was regarding her steadily and sadly. Her eyes wavered under his look and fell to where his hand rested on the edge of the table, with the forgotten emerald flashing on his finger. She gave a little cry that made Abbott's heart ache, and glanced with swift fear at her father and back imploringly to Abbott. He instantly dropped his hand.

"What is the matter, Kitty ?" demanded Colonel Hunter impatiently. "You act like a hysterical schoolgirl."

She did, indeed, for the next moment she was sobbing so uncontrollably that there was nothing for it but to leave the room.

"What the mischief is the matter with the girl ? I never knew her to act like this in all her life," protested the bewildered Colonel. "She must be tired out. I don't believe these long rides she is so fond of taking are good for her."

Abbott swallowed his coffee at a gulp.

"I don't believe they are," he agreed earnestly. "Can't you prevent them ? Send her pony away, and put — put temptation out of reach !"

"I believe I will. Come, she has spoiled one dinner for both of us ; shall we have a game of cards ?"

"No, thank you," said Abbott, rising with nervous relief. "I must go back to the village at once. Will you present my excuses to Miss Hunter ?"

He got out of the house with unceremonious haste. To have a chance to think was the one thing he wanted. As he wheeled into the main road, his horse turned his head and neighed, and Abbott pulled up sharply at an answering tramp among the bushes. A riderless pony was standing tied just off the road. Abbott turned in his saddle, and looked back at the house. Kitty's balcony window faced toward him, and, though the dusk had fallen, what he did see was significant enough. A slender figure in a riding habit of dark gray stood outlined for an instant on the balcony, and then slid down to the ground by means of a trellis which he knew leaned against the house.

Abbott pulled his hat down over his eyes and rode slowly on, letting the horse take his own path and pace. Was Kitty Hunter insane? There are some things which it is impossible for a man to believe of the woman he loves. Better, infinitely better, that she be found insane — or dead.

The sound of a pony's feet behind cut across his thoughts and made him sit up. Could it be that in this way she was seeking an interview with him? He rode on slowly until he reached a shadowy clump of wayside trees, and then he deliberately halted. The pony came up at a gallop — even at that moment he could not help admiring the swinging grace with which she rode — and the next instant a scarf or shawl was thrown over his head, completely blinding him, and then he felt a noose tighten about his arms, binding them to his body. In the first surprise he instinctively struggled a moment; then he dropped his hands and waited quietly. He knew at once what she wanted. He sat motionless and silent while she examined first one of his hands and then the other, and then went through his pockets. He knew when she found the ring, and he knew she had taken nothing else from his purse. Then he heard the pony clatter off. He freed his arms with little difficulty and lifted the cloth from his head. It was a small embroidered shawl of Japanese silk which Kitty had often worn of an evening.

For three days he staid at the Grandon, unable to tear himself away from the neighborhood, unable to return to Colonel Hunter's house, waiting vaguely for something to happen. Something did. On the third day, as evening fell, Colonel Hunter was brought into the village by some farmers who had found him lying on the road, sorely wounded.

"It was Miss Robin Hood. I was fool enough to think she wouldn't actually shoot," he said, before he fainted from loss of blood.

"He hasn't a shadow of a chance," the doctor said, after a hasty examination of the wound.

"I'll carry word to his daughter," said Abbott; and the people, who knew his intimacy at the house, left him to bear the message, while they set about organizing a sheriff's posse to scour the country for the highwaywoman.

Abbot rode as he would not have ridden for his life. Did she know that it was her own father that she had shot? Mad or not, wicked or not, he must see her, — must see her at once.

He left his steaming horse at the gate and entered by a side-door without seeing a servant. He hurried through to the library, where, to his surprise, he heard voices and gay laughter. Unceremoniously he opened the door, and faced Kitty and a young man — a young man who had Kitty's eyes and Kitty's laugh and Kitty's slender figure and slim brown hands. The three stared at each other in silent astonishment for a moment, and then Kitty sprang forward.

"Oh, Mr. Abbott, please don't tell. This is my brother Dick, — my darling twin brother — and papa — papa has forbidden me to see him — and I had to see him. Papa is angry just now because Dick won't be a soldier, but — but — oh, he will forgive him in time, and dear Dick can come back to us. But please don't tell him that I have seen Dick while he was away. Why, Dick is so afraid of being seen that he wears an old habit of mine when he comes out here, so that if any one should see him, they would think it was I."

Abbott's heart had leaped into his throat at her first word and he put out his hand to steady himself. The revulsion of feeling nearly swept him from his feet. She was innocent! She did not even know her brother's guilt. If possible he would save her from ever knowing.

"Your father has met with an accident," he said, after that moment's rapid thinking. "That is what I came out to tell you. Now I will ask your brother to come back with me at once, and — I will explain to him on the way."

"Oh, can't I come, too? How did it happen? Is it serious? Oh, I must go to him!"

"Not to-night. Promise me you will stay here to-night. Tomorrow I will come back, and then you shall do as you wish."

She looked at him with earnest inquiry, and then yielded with a sweetness that made it hard for him not to take her in his arms.

"If you think best—" she said.

"I say, is the governor badly hurt?" asked Dick, with unmistakable anxiety.

Abbott did not answer till he got him outside of the house. Then he let him have it.

"Yes, I'm afraid it is pretty bad. But now—where's your pony? Tied in the brush?"

The boy grinned. "You seem to have caught on."

"I've had reason to. The thing for you to do now is to get on that pony of yours and ride as you never rode before. The sheriff has a posse out after you, and there is no time to lose."

The boy whistled. "Whew! That looks serious. I say, did you give me away?"

Abbott stared in astonishment at his effrontery. "I'm afraid you did that yourself," he said drily. "There, don't stop to talk. If you can reach the railroad at some way station, you may get off. I think that's enough said. Good-bye."

"You're nervous," laughed the boy. But he stepped aside into the bushes, and in a minute Abbott heard the quick clatter of his pony's feet scampering off. He drew a deep breath of relief when the sound died out, and then galloped back to town, in hope of being able to delay the posse by some ruse. But for that he was too late. The sheriff and his mounted men had already scattered to patrol the country roads in all directions. A system of signals had been arranged, he learned—a gun was to be fired if Miss Robin Hood were captured—one gun if captured alive and unharmed, two if wounded, three if dead. He listened silently to the excited talk of the people, while he was calculating how long it would take for Dick Hunter to reach a way station beyond the line of search. Well, at any rate, nothing more could be done now.

Abbott spent the night watching, with a young doctor of the town, over Colonel Hunter, whose consciousness had not returned, and who sank steadily through the long hours of darkness. The little village settled down into its peaceful sleep, but for Abbott the night was a long, anxious vigil, filled with tumultuous doubts and fears. If only Kitty might be spared from knowing! At last the day broke and the village awoke, and Abbott looked at his watch with a sigh of relief. Surely by this time the boy must have got away beyond reach of pursuit.

There came a clatter of hoofs down the street — one of the posse returning. Abbott sprang to the window as the man reined up at the little public square, and raised his rifle. The signal! A shot startled the quiet town — another — a third — and the man lowered his rifle, while the people who had appeared mysteriously on the street crowded about him. Three shots — dead!

Abbott stood still for a moment, paralyzed by this new complication. It would be impossible now to keep the truth from the boy's sister — yet how tell her that her father had been shot by her brother's hand, that brother an outlaw, shot in turn by the officers of the law? He was turning the thought in desperation, when a voice in the hall below broke in upon him — her voice!

"But I must and will see my father," she was protesting. "It is my right."

Abbott exchanged glances with the young doctor, who had joined him, and went down the stairs two steps at a time.

"Miss Kitty, come in here one moment first," he said, leading her into the dingy little hotel parlor. He closed the door and took her hands in both his own.

"My darling, before you hear what has happened — before you go upstairs — I want to tell you that I love you. That means that I am here by your side to help you if you need me, to stand between you and any sorrow that I can keep from you, to do whatever you may want me to do. I tell you this now, not because I want an answer — I am not making love to you — but because if you feel that you need me, you must know that I am here."

She caught her breath with a sob, and her hands fluttered in his. "Oh, what has happened? Poor papa —?"

"Your father was shot by — by your brother. Don't look so! He didn't know what he was doing — I feel sure of that. And now — I would save you from knowing if I could, Kitty — your unhappy brother has met the fate he dealt to his father. He was killed last night by the sheriff's men."

Kitty Hunter had borne up under a good deal of stress, but this was too much for her overtaxed nerves. She sighed like a tired child, and slipped forward without a word, in a dead faint.

"My poor child," breathed Abbott, thinking compassionately of her awaking, while he gently chafed her pulseless hands.

"In here? Now? I must see her," cried an impatient voice outside, and Abbott sprang to his feet as the door was flung open with a bang. Dick Hunter stood there, defiant, dust-stained and haggard — but Dick, and alive.

"Is my sister here? What have you been saying to her?" he demanded angrily, coming quickly inside.

"For heaven's sake, what are you doing here? Reckless boy, why have you come back?" cried Abbott. He sprang to the window and looked out. The sheriff and two of his men, all mounted, were stationed outside. Doubtless the house was guarded all about. He put his hand heavily on the shoulder of the boy, who had knelt beside his sister.

"Do they know you are here? If you hope to escape, we must lose no time. Come — come before she recovers and sees you."

Dick shook his hand off impatiently, and made no other answer.

"Kitty," he called softly — and Kitty opened her eyes, looked at him, and began to sob.

There was a sound of hurrying feet in the hall. Abbott sprang to the door, but he was too late. The sheriff entered hastily, and with him the young doctor.

"Here he is!" cried the doctor. "Mr. Abbott, the Colonel has recovered consciousness, and wants to see you. He's going to pull through all right after all, thank heaven!"

"Then you can come over at once and give your certificate on Miss Robin Hood," said the sheriff to the doctor. "The body is at the jail. I'm glad I don't have this sort of a job on my hands every night of the year," he added grimly.

"Body at the jail? Whose body?" gasped Abbott.

"Miss Robin Hood's, as they call her. We surrounded her, and she opened fire — and some fool fired back. I would have given my right hand to prevent it."

"Then — then — who was she?" Abbott managed to stammer.

"Moll Deemer, her real name is. We were practically sure of it before, but her confession, after she was shot, gives all the story. Well, we are all sinners. Come, Doctor."

They left the room, and Abbott walked back to Dick, who had been talking earnestly with his sister.

"Well, young man?" said Abbott sternly.

Dick tried to scowl, but it ended in a laugh.

"Well, if I scared you, I guess you've got even with me, by what Kitty tells me you've been saying about me. I've a mind to have you arrested for defamation of character."

"How far did your pranks go? This is serious."

"Honestly, I never held any one up but yourself. The first time was just for fun — just to see if you'd squeal, you know. I was at the hotel that evening, and heard you wish that you might meet her, and I thought it would be a shame not to trot out all the sights for my father's guest. Then — I had to get back that ring, you know, because it was Kitty's, and she was worried about it. I was at the house that evening. But I suppose I was a fool to do it."

"Yes, you were," Abbott agreed heartily. "Now just go off and reflect on that." He put him firmly outside of the door, and came back to Kitty.

"Do you remember what I was saying before you fainted?"

"Why — not very distinctly."

"Then I shall have to say it all over again. I love you — I love you — love you —"

"Oh, but when you said that you thought Dick was a highwayman, and — and you were sorry for me. Now that you know he isn't, you needn't feel bound by what you said under that misapprehension."

But Abbott's answer has nothing to do with this story, which ends with Miss Robin Hood.

The Lynching at Crutcher's.*

BY DAVID LOWRY.

RUTCHER pushed the door open and walked in silently. His wife was frying bacon and eggs. She heard the sound of Dan's hoofs just as the sun's slanting rays shifted from the notch on the support of the porch she stood on waiting for her husband, turned mechanically and placed the frying pan on the fire. Crutcher would be famished — without dinner. It was a tiresome ride to Riggstown, and mostly up hill home. She was inclined to be hysterical — she had cried hysterically the moment she was left alone that day. The strange warning that Crutcher had received the day before disturbed both as they had not been moved since Bill left home. It was so vague, yet it came from a friend.

"Why can't folks speak out?" Mrs. Crutcher said to herself for the fiftieth time that day as she turned the even slices of bacon and wiped her eyes furtively the last time — she wouldn't let Jim see she had been crying. But when Jim strode in and hung his hat on the peg without speaking it required an extraordinary effort to restrain the tears. He walked out of the back door, lifted the gourd and drank heartily. Then he walked in and sat down.

"Bill's dead."

Something clutched his wife's throat. If her salvation depended on it she could not utter a word. She put her hand to her throat.

"I mean he's the same as dead to us."

Then the mother asserted herself. The frying pan was forgotten as she faced him sternly.

"Jim Crutcher!"

"Needn't talk any. No use." Crutcher's boot — the boot

* Copyright, 1905, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

crossing his left leg — was swinging now. "He's as good as dead — to us."

"You seen Graham? What did he say? Why didn't he come out and tell us? It is the littlest he could do, seeing what we did for them."

"Well, now, if I'd anything to tell that was encouragin'. But Graham don't know. He heard a man like Bill was yanked up near Treemont. From all accounts it may be Bill."

"What did — the man do?"

"Stole the sheriff's hoss — and plugged the sheriff."

"Is the sheriff dead?"

"Laid out in Hopper's saloon."

"Oh, Jim!" The bacon sizzled — an odor filled the cabin. At any other time its mistress would have exclaimed. Now she put a hand over her eyes and sat down beside her husband.

"It can't be helped." The contortion Jim's features presented at that moment showed what it cost him. But now the wheels of a wagon crunched the rocky road below them. When the Barkers passed in a creaking wagon five minutes later Crutcher was playing his fiddle and Mrs. Crutcher was looking out of the door. She nodded to the three Barkers in the wagon.

When Crutcher tried to eat, a few minutes later, he could not swallow the meat he liked so much. He got up from the table and lit his pipe.

That was the way misery came to Crutcher's. Their only son had left his home in a "tiff" six months before his last unaccountable leavetaking. When he returned he was welcomed as though he had brought back great riches instead of ragged clothes. By the time he was "rigged out to kill," to borrow the words of his associates on Dowell's Flat, he disappeared again mysteriously between two days. No one had ever seen him or heard of him since. That was four years ago.

"I'm dead tired." Jim Crutcher laid his pipe down as he spoke. Silence brooded over the valley again. The victuals were untouched. "Guess I'll turn in."

Mrs. Crutcher sat motionless looking out of the window long after her husband went to bed. The mysterious afterglow in the sky, the motionless pines on the hills opposite, the clouds hanging motionless above the little valley, the sheep grazing far below her on the toothsome grass — all were unnoticed. Not a leaf stirred — the world seemed to be fresh from the Maker's hand. There was no human being to help her — to comfort her. The blow had paralyzed Jim Crutcher — it was the first time the man had been crushed, but he made no pretence of holding up his head — he walked to his bed like a man in a waking dream. Mrs. Crutcher sat far into the night. She scarcely knew whether she were awake or dreaming the greater portion of the time. She was young again; Jim Crutcher was the best dancer in the countryside; a master hand with the fiddle. When he married her and took her to his new house on the county road everybody predicted they would make their way in the world. Then Will was born — "Bill" later on he was called. Before he was able to walk they came out West. And then she thanked God she had a man child. Bill thrived. He was the wonder of the neighborhood. What couldn't Bill do when he was ten? And what a time they had only the last turkey shoot over Bill's fancy shooting, when he vanquished the crack shots from Warm Springs. And now —

"Hain't you been to bed?"

Then she realized, as she stared up in a dazed way at her husband, that she was half waking, half dreaming. Jim Crutcher said no more. He was always considerate; now he was wise.

It rained that day as it had never rained within the memory of the oldest resident on Dowell's Flat. It kept up the following night. The rain did not cease the next day. Nobody worked. For the simple reason, as the biggest loafer on Dowell's Flat — Ham Carter — alleged, that there was no use wasting time doing anything until they knew whether the Flat was going to be there or not.

The waters were creeping up to a height unknown. Some of the frame houses were floating out into the current. At noon a passing kiss of the waters wrenched the new school house from its base. Long before one it had passed out of the sight of teacher and pupils. When cords and lines, such as Driggs, the hardware man, relied on, were unable to bear the strain imposed upon them, and the hardware store swept against the post office, a brief diversion was provided the onlookers who saw Sam Moore — whose law office was over the post office — staggering down the steps with his arms full of books and papers. He called for assistance. Only Billy Coombs paid any attention to him. Billy was half witted. Moore swore roundly — jeers and laughter was his only answer. He barely escaped sinking to his waist in the roily water. As he waded ashore, holding his books and papers high above his head, the guffaw that met him silenced him for the time.

Needless to add that by this time the male portion of the population, like a shipwrecked crew, resorted to whiskey. With the exception of the preacher, every man on Dowell's Flat was "roaring drunk" — to employ Hart Caughey's vivid language — or in a fair way to illustrate that condition. Half the men were crowded into Hart's saloon, where the water was swirling in eddies under the floor. The other half of the population was crowded into Jim Crutcher's cabin up the cove.

Jim Crutcher was the most eccentric member of a community composed of Swedes, Norwegians, Yankees, Western men and men who drawled their vowels — Southerners. All hard workers when there was work to be done, but swart, horny handed with toil. The material for a forlorn hope, if properly directed, just as certainly as men's passions and moods could be swayed to mock heaven.

The women and children were housed in Hatcher's big barn. The women accepted their misfortune without murmuring, the children regarded the experience in the light of a frolic.

It was about two o'clock, judging from after comparisons, when a stranger elbowed his way into Hart Caughey's saloon. Where he came from nobody knew. How he came was a puzzle. He never came down the river, the experienced said. No man could make his way across Dowell's Flat without a boat, dry-legged, as the stranger stood before Caughey's bar. And the rains had made the road passing Hank's Point soggy, boggy — he couldn't ride over without getting himself covered with yellow mud!

"Just shove that jug this way, landlord."

The crowd in Caughey's saw the stranger reach a hand — his left — for the jug Caughey pushed towards him. The stranger pushed a gold piece toward Caughey, poured out two-thirds of a tumbler, swallowed it at a gulp. Then, resting an elbow on the counter, he said as he glanced about him:

"Any old-timers here?"

"Don't know what you call old timers." Caughey rubbed his chin contemplatively. "I've been here since sixty-seven." Caughey's claim to be the oldest settler on Dowell's Flat had never been disputed.

A loud splashing at that moment arrested the attention of the crowd in the saloon. The door was burst rather than pushed open and the flushed face of Lige Hitchcock was framed in the doorway. His hair was dishevelled, his vest unbuttoned, his collar wide open. Perspiration rolled from his forehead and cheeks.

A dozen voices filled the saloon at once:

"What's up?"

Lige turned from one to another. "Murder's up!" He swept the crowd with a glance. "Somebody's killed Ben Mason — cut his throat from ear to ear."

In less than a minute the saloon was emptied, its only remaining occupants being the stranger and Hart Caughey.

Mason had lived alone. He had means, but he was morose and snappy-tongued, and found fault with everything under the sun. But now that he was dead — murdered — his ungovernable temper and prejudices were forgotten. The crowd that looked at the dead blacksmith beheld, if possible, an expression more ferocious in death than Mason's was in life. The awful repose and inscrutable expression that frequently softens the features of the dead were absent. The man had been cut down when animal passions were aflame.

One or two coins lay on the floor; a chair was overturned; near the smith's right hand was the helve of an axe. A brief search satisfied the crowd that robbery had been the motive — thorough search that the smith's money was stolen. The crowd left the smith's cabin as quickly as they had entered it. Blind impulse ruled. Reason, charity, common sense had no place there. Inflamed with drink, resolved to lose no time in punishing the murderer if he could be found, the crowd floundered through the mud back to Caughey's saloon.

The stranger was talking to Caughey when the crowd entered. The foremost man grasped him.

"We want you," he said huskily.

The devil shone in the eyes that surrounded the stranger. Wasn't it plain to everybody? The stranger had come over the hills. He had stopped overnight with Mason, doubtless. How else could he reach the Flat without splashing mud all over himself? His boots were clean. Mason had "put up a good fight" — the cabin showed that much — but doubtless the murderer took unfair advantage of him. It was bad enough to rob him — it was worse to cut his throat!

The stranger at first endeavored to reason with the crowd — until he realized that every word he uttered was twisted against him. Then a strange calm grew on him. He seemed to realize that his last hour had come. He contemplated his captors, at first contemptuously, then pityingly.

Where would they hang him?

The saloon was tottering on its pegs. Hart Caughey paused in the work of carrying his precious stores out of the saloon long enough to warn the crowd. Then somebody shouted, "Let's take him to Crutcher's."

The crowd echoed hoarsely "To Crutcher's!"

Crutcher was playing his fiddle when his door was opened without preliminary knock. Several men entered. Crutcher listened with bated breath to the story. Certainly the man who had killed Mason ought to be hanged! Crutcher was ready to help hang him!

On the slope near Crutcher's house a large walnut tree spread its limbs. Under this tree an excited crowd gathered around the prisoner, who again essayed in vain to obtain a hearing. He tried to tell them that he had been absent from the country four years — that he had only returned the day before — to all of which the crowd returned mocking answers. They were still under the sway of King Alcohol.

"For God's sake," the preacher implored with streaming eyes, "give him time to pray."

The prisoner smiled scornfully.

"I never believed in death-bed prayers."

"Well," persisted the preacher, "let him give us his name. It may be a kindness to his relatives to learn —"

A laugh interrupted the preacher. The majority there were of the opinion that the relatives of a man hanged for robbery and murder would not thank anybody for the information.

Jim Cruteher was making his way to the centre of the group about the prisoner. His manner now was strangely irresolute. Those near him remarked his pallor. He was not thinking of the dead man. A living man — his own son, a prisoner charged with murder — was in his mind. Strange that he had even for a moment failed to realize the position he voluntarily placed himself in.

Crutcher was pressing through the crowd when his wife, who could no longer resist the overmastering desire to look on the prisoner, advanced to the window quickly and glanced out.

It was a bold face — a face easily read — that was turned to her as the stranger stood calmly, fearlessly facing Crutcher, who at that moment pushed his way through the crowd. The prisoner started, his lips parted, but before he could speak a woman's shriek filled the air. The crowd parted right and left as Mrs. Crutcher flung herself upon the stranger, exclaiming:

"Don't you see, Jim! It's our Bill!"

Years afterward they related how Crutcher had volunteered to help hang his own son, whose innocence was established the next day. And his four years' record proved as "straight as a bee line."

The Door Without a Keyhole.*

BY J. L. DAVIES.

It certainly was puzzling. We had watched him go in any number of times. I had, in a cautious way, examined the door, after I had seen him leave the house, and knew the door was locked, having tried the knob. Together we had watched him from behind closely curtained windows, pull out a bunch of keys, and, after carefully selecting one, open the door and disappear inside. But where was the keyhole? We could not discover any signs of one. It began to prey on our minds. I lost all interest in everything else, and spent most of my time in watching that door. The house was directly across the street, and I had an unobstructed view of the doorknob. Every time I saw him coming I would rush to the window and strain my eyes to discover the method he employed in entering.

In my well-regulated life I had never yet allowed anything to so completely control my every action, but when one sees with his own eyes the entrance of a man into a house, with a key in his hand, and no keyhole in the door, I do not think one is to be blamed for yielding to a natural curiosity.

It was in a very uneasy and nervous state of mind that I decided to call upon my old friend, Michael O'Hara, chief of police. He laughed heartily at my story, but noting my extreme nervousness, suddenly became serious, and asked in what way he could serve me. Did I want the man arrested? Should he send an officer to watch the house? Anything he could do would be done.

I could think of no better plan than to have a man put on watch, and I suggested that to operate safely and attract little attention, he had best come to my house and begin his vigil there.

With the chief's promise of the detective that afternoon, I took my leave, determined to have a closer look at the mysterious premises on my way home. As I approached the house and obtained a near view of the haunting—I might almost say accursed—doorknob, of which I had thought so much, even in my dreams. I started with something like terror, fearing I must still be dreaming, for now there was no knob at all, though I most distinctly saw a keyhole. I stared like one bereft, and then ran across the street and into my own house. My wife met me in the hall, but I rushed by her and into my room, and flung myself upon a couch, burying my head in my hands. My wife followed me, trying to calm my excitement, and discover what had occurred.

"The keyhole is gone! No; the doorknob is gone! Oh! No! I don't know which is gone," I gasped.

"Oh! Is it the door opposite that has caused you to lose control of yourself?" exclaimed my wife. "What is the matter now?"

"There is no doorknob, but there is a keyhole," I answered.

"That is very strange," said my wife. "Are you sure?"

She walked to the window, and I followed, in a dazed condition. We looked out together, and there, where I could have sworn I had a few minutes before seen a keyhole, there was nothing but a knob! My wife looked at me curiously, to see if I was demented. As we stood looking across at the house, the occupant came out and, closing the door, walked rapidly away.

That afternoon the detective called, and I showed him to the front room, gave him a comfortable seat in a commanding position, and pointed out the house, across the way. He asked me a number of questions, to which I gave slight heed, for I was revolving a plan that would carry me into the enemy's country—for by this time I considered the man across the way my enemy. It was nothing more nor less than to beard the lion in his den. I would call on him that very day, as soon as he returned. I felt that I could not get a night's sleep after what I had seen that day.

I explained the sudden disappearance of the knob, followed by the disappearance of the keyhole, and asked the officer if he would accompany me on my projected visit, and he readily agreed.

We sat smoking and talking for nearly two hours, and I had regained something of my customary composure, when the watchful detective suddenly pressed my arm. Following his glance, I saw the occupant of the opposite house ascending the steps.

We started immediately, but our man had entered and closed his door when we reached the street. I mounted the steps and rapped sharply, and in response the door swung open and the man stood before us, inviting us to enter.

At this abrupt welcome, I felt a return of my nervous dread, but, emboldened by the presence of the officer, I stepped in, and we followed our host into a comfortably furnished room.

In response to a polite inquiry as to the nature of our call, I introduced myself as an opposite neighbor, and said that I had a two-fold reason for calling. The first was to make his acquaintance, and the second, — but here I stammered and hesitated, for I found it extremely difficult to explain. But here the detective came to my rescue, seeing the embarrassment I was in.

"Mr. Merwin," he said, for as such our host had introduced himself, "I know you will pardon us, but it is your front door that has caused us to intrude upon you."

"My front door!" exclaimed Mr. Merwin.

"To be more explicit, the knob on your front door," answered the detective, "for it seems to have a knack of appearing and disappearing."

"Well! well!" exclaimed Mr. Merwin, and we really thought he would explode with laughter. "I had no idea I was being watched," he said, after this outburst, "but as it can make no difference now, as to-day I have secured the patent I have been working for, I will explain. Here is a working model," he said, going to a cabinet, and bringing forth a miniature door, "that will show what I mean. You see here a knob. Notice that I raise it, so, and I disclose the keyhole. I insert the key thus, unlock the catch, remove the key, drop the knob, so, and there you have the door with no ugly defacement of a keyhole. To-day I removed the one on my front door to make a slight alteration. That, gentlemen, is what I call rather a neat invention."

I went home, and that night slept the first sound sleep I had had since discovering the door without a keyhole.

WHAT IS IT?

The beverage in that cup has caused as much discussion as the Panama Canal or Christian Science.

Some people, half sick all the time, insist that "Coffee don't hurt me; why, I only drink one cup at breakfast."

If they really believe coffee to be harmless they would drink two cups at breakfast and have it at luncheon and dinner, also. But they know the distress that would follow; and yet they feel they cannot give it up.

Easiest thing on earth to give up coffee, provided you shift to well-made POSTUM FOOD COFFEE. There is the deep seal-brown color which changes to a rich golden brown when cream is added. There is the crisp yet delicate flavor of the most expensive grade of Java, and a fragrance, not just that of coffee, but refreshing and inviting, which belongs only to POSTUM.

In a week after the change, the old aches and ails begin to disappear, and the indescribable joy and comfort of returning health sets in.

There's a reason, and you can make it plain to yourself by shifting from the drug drink to the pure food drink —

POSTUM

The Sick Simply Ask

And for them I will do this.

Do not send me a penny.

I — not you — take the risk.

Simply write. Then

I will send you my book.

I will arrange with a druggist near you that you may take six bottles of

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

On a month's trial. If it succeeds the cost to you is $5.50. If it fails, the druggist will bill the cost to me. And I leave the decision to you.

This is not a Free Gift

Not free treatment, mind you, with nothing ever to pay. Such an offer would be misleading—would belittle the physician who made it. But I believe in a sick one's honesty—his gratitude. That when he is helped, he will pay the cost of the treatment—and gladly.

When I fail, I ask not one penny.

But failures are seldom.

Over 600,000 sick ones have accepted my offer. Not the slightly ill, nor the indisposed. These simply get a bottle or two of their druggist, are cured and I never hear from them. But sick ones with diseases often obstinate and deep-seated. Even then 39 out of 40—my records show—have paid.

They need not if the medicine had failed.

I did not make this offer before my discovery. It would have meant bankruptcy. For I was treating then—just as other physicians, even other specialists, are treating now—the organs themselves and not the inside nerves. These nerves operate the vital organs. They give them strength and health and power. They—not the organs—need the treatment.

That treatment is my discovery. For it I labored a life-time. It has shown me the way to cure. It has made failures in my practice so seldom that I can make this offer. And with no risk to the sick, and little chance of loss to me.

How to get Six Bottles on Trial

Just write me to-day. That is all. The offer is broad—is liberal. The way is easy—is simple. The Restorative is certain. It will bring all the help that medicine can bring.

Keep it in your home.

It will ward off serious illness. Off days come to us all. A few doses will set things right again. It is easier to prevent than to cure.

Seriously or slightly ill, write me to-day. Tell me which book to send.

Know now how to get well—how to keep well.

DR. SHOOP'S RESTORATIVE

At the Doctor's Risk

Dr. Shoop, Box 2232,
Racine, Wisconsin
Send me book No. _____
and tell me where I can secure six bottles Dr.
Shoop's Restorative on 30 days' trial.

Book 1 on Dyspepsia
Book 2 on the Heart
Book 3 on the Kidneys
Book 4 for Women
Book 5 for Men (scaled)
Book 6 on Rheumatism

Name _____

City _____ State _____

Street _____

Write plainly.

DIAMONDS ON CREDIT

Diamonds on Credit under the LOFTIS SYSTEM means that any person of honest intentions, no matter how far away they may live, may open a Confidential Charge Account for a Diamond, Watch or other valuable article of jewelry, and pay the same in a series of easy monthly payments.

How To Do It. Write to-day for our beautifully illustrated Catalogue, and from it select any article that you would like to wear or own; or perhaps use as a gift to a loved one. We will send your selection on approval to your home, place of business or express office as you prefer. Examine it as leisurely and as carefully as you wish; then, if it is all that you anticipated, and the best value you ever saw for the money asked—pay one-fifth of the price and keep it. The balance you may send us in eight equal monthly payments.

On the Other Hand, if you decide not to buy, simply return the article to us at our expense. Whether you buy or not, we pay all express and other charges—you pay nothing, neither do you assume any risk or obligation whatever. We submit our goods on their merits, with absolute confidence that their quality, low price and our easy terms of payment will command your favor. We ask but one opportunity for adding your name to the largest list of pleased customers with which a Diamond house was ever honored.

To the Cash Buyer of Diamonds, a written agreement to return all that they pay for a Diamond—less ten per cent., at any time within one year. Thus, one might wear a fifty dollar Diamond for a whole year, then send it back and get $45.00, making the cost of wearing the Diamond less than ten cents per week.

Write to-day
for catalogue

We are the Largest House in the Diamond business. We are also one of the oldest—list, 1874. We refer to any bank in America—ask your local bank how we stand in the business world. They will refer to their Commercial Agency books and tell you that we stand very high, and that our representations may be accepted without question.

Our Guarantee Certificate given with every Diamond, is the broadest and strongest ever issued by a responsible concern. Further, we give the broad guarantee of complete satisfaction to every purchaser. Our exchange system is the most liberal ever devised, for it permits you to return any Diamond bought of us, and get the full amount paid in exchange for other goods or a larger Diamond.

Your Christmas Plans will not be complete until you have looked through our Catalogue, and considered what you can do in gift-making in conjunction with the LOFTIS SYSTEM. The $5.00 which you might pay for something cheap and trashy, will make the first payment on, and put you in immediate possession of a splendid Diamond or Watch. You can thus make gifts that are commensurate with, and appropriate to the circumstances, without any considerable initial outlay. There can be no more favorable time than the present for buying a Diamond. Prices are advancing steadily and a profit of 15 or 20 per cent within a year seems assured. Dealers generally agree in this prediction.

We have a proposition to make which is thoroughly characteristic of our house. It is nothing less than a Diamond—less ten per cent., at any time within one year. Thus, one might wear a fifty dollar Diamond for a whole year, then send it back and get $45.00, making the cost of wearing the Diamond less than ten cents per week.

LOFTIS BROS. & CO.
Diamonds—Watches—Jewelry
Dept. 11-52, 92 to 98 State St., Chicago, Ill.

I Can Sell Your Real Estate

no matter where it is or what it is worth.

Send description, state price and learn my wonderfully successful plan.

W. M. OSTRANDER

132 North American Building, PHILADELPHIA

PLANS of house, six rooms, bath, etc. $1.00
B. printed set of scale working drawings, unique in every respect. Sent on receipt of $1.00. The Peoples Arch, Look Box 180, Sharon, Pa.

Mullins' Metal Canoes

SECTIONAL INDIAN CANOE.

Made in Galvanized Steel, 14 feet long.

PRICE, $28.00,
crated cars
Salem.

Very convenient for storing and handling.
Saves one half the Handsome illustrated

Catalogue
Free on Application.

freight. Air chambers. No repairs.

W. M. MULLINS

471 Depot Street

Salem, Ohio

"Where every prospect pleases."

FIVE POINTS OF EXCELLENCE.

Leaving the center of the city from which you start; reaching the center of the city of your destination; over smooth and level tracks; giving rest and comfort; riding beside running waters most of the way; through the centers of population to the gateways of commerce; when you travel by the

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES.

A copy of No. 5 of the "Four-Track Series," "America's Winter Resorts," will be sent free, post-paid to any address, on receipt of a postage stamp, by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, Grand Central Station, New York.

Indians of the Southwest

Where they live and how to get there—their homes, handicraft and ceremonies—an intensely interesting book of more than two hundred pages—written by Geo. A. Dorsey, Ph.D., Curator of Anthropology, Field Columbian Museum, an authority on the "Amerind"—profusely illustrated with half-tones from special photos—handsome cover in color—sent anywhere on receipt of fifty cents—valuable for schoolroom or library. Address General Passenger Office, A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., Chicago.

THE EQUITABLE

HENRY B. HYDE
FOUNDER

J.W. ALEXANDER
PRESIDENT

J.H. HYDE
VICE PRESIDENT

"Like leaves of trees the race of man is found, Now green in youth, now withering on the ground."
—Pope

FALLING LEAVES

warn us that winter-time is fast approaching. And we prepare for it.

But how about the winter-time of life? When the winter of your life approaches, will it be bare and cheerless as that of the tree stripped of its leaves?

An adequate Endowment policy in the Equitable makes a sure provision for your maturer years,—and meanwhile will protect your family.

Vacancies for men of character to act as representatives.

Apply to GAGE E. TARBELL, 222 Vice President

For full information fill out this coupon, or write

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY of the United States

120 Broadway, New York

Dept. No. 115

Please send me information regarding an Endowment for $

If issued at years of age.

Name

Address

Every Woman

SHOULD USE

F.P.C.

WAX

WHEN

IRONING

All Dealers or 2 pieces
by mail for 10 cents

FLAME-PROOF CO., Manufacturers

NEW YORK

ABSOLUTE PURITY

IN KITCHEN UTENSILS
FREEDOM FROM POISON is hereby guaranteed

WE

MAKE

1520

KINDS

The Blue Label on every piece proves our statement.

When you buy Kitchen-Ware, buy

AGATE NICKEL-STEEL.

LALANCE & GROSJEAN MFG. CO.

New York

Boston

Chicago

GIANT HEATER

A WONDERFUL INVENTION

Will heat every room in your house cheaper and better than stoves.

CLEAN, EFFICIENT,
ODORLESS.

No ashes and no trouble.

Attached to gas-jet or oil-lamp, the Giant Heater develops a new principle of draught, that circulates the air, purifies it, and warms it to any desired degree. It is made of polished brass, and is an ornament to any room.

Does not obstruct the light.

No more necessity for stoves or furnaces.

HEATER ON OIL-LAMP.

BEST COMPLETE, CARRIAGE
PREPAID, FOR
$6 for $8.00; 12 for $15.00.

$1.50

Send us $1.50 for one Giant Heater; use it to days. If you are not more than satisfied, return it, and your money will be refunded. Write for booklet, which tells all about it.

Giant Heater Co.,

74 Housmouth Street,
Springfield, Mass.

THE IDEAL BABY YARD

Can be used in or out of doors. Saves mothers time and worry, as they can attend to their household duties with the assurance that the child is well guarded from accident. Folds flat when not in use, opened makes a yard 4 x 4 ft. sq. Send for booklet.

THE BROOKS CO., ROXBURY, MASS.

LADIES having fancywork to sell, Dolls, Centerpieces, Rattensberg and Drawn work; all kinds fancywork bought and sold; send stamped envelope to LADIES EXCHANGE, Dept. 2 T, 84 Monroe St., Chicago.

FREE We trust you to sell 25 lovely scarf-pins at 2 cents each. Send money, when sold, and we send you a Rolled Gold Watch Chain and Charm, solid gold pattern. All goods mailed you free of charge. Send address. Thousands pleased. SCHWALE & CO., 1732 Amsterdam Ave., New York.

We Carpet Your Floor for $3

To introduce our new, remarkable and beautiful

BRUSSELETTE ART RUGS

Attractive and artistic patterns, woven on both sides and in all colors and sizes. Easily kept clean and warranted to outwear higher-priced carpets. Sent prepaid to any point east of the Rocky Mountains. Money refunded if not satisfactory. Illustrated catalogue showing rugs in actual colors sent free.

Sanitary Mfg. Co. (Inc.) Dept. 15, 145 Oxford St. Philadelphia, Pa.

6% for 7 Years, and then 100% Every Year For More than a Lifetime.

The 6 per cent per annum for 7 years (equal to 42 per cent of your principal) is guaranteed by a distinguished and responsible Trust company. The 100 per cent per year thereafter is assured upon the maturing of a product as indispensable to our modern civilization as wheat—or cotton—or coal; which can be sold every day in the year, in every market in the world, and at a stable price that has been steadily advancing for many years.

No such proposition has thus far been before. It is presented to you. Every person who has 2,000 or more to invest should investigate this offer.

Our facts and figures are printed in U. S. Government reports. The plan is absolutely unique and perfectly safeguarded; all we ask is a chance to show it to you.

On an investment of $1000 this offer means a return of $60 per year for seven years ($420) and then an income of 1000 per year permanently for you or your heirs.

Our literature explains our plan fully and completely, and proves every statement. We will send it to you immediately on request.

Mutual Rubber Production Company, 90 Milk St., Boston, Mass.

PARALYSIS

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA CONQUERED AT LAST BY
DR. CHASE'S BLOOD AND NERVE FOOD.
Write me about your case. Advice and proof of cure
FREE. DR. CHASE, 224 N. 10th St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Buy Stocks Direct

I am on the ground and personally investigate stocks offered. Millions made every year in Mining and Oil Stocks. Good opportunities for small investors. Correspondence solicited.

F. K. RULE, Jr., Broker,
Wilcox Bldg., Los Angeles.

INVESTMENTS THAT PAY

During the past few years we have financed a large number of successful enterprises that are now paying first investors from 125 to 80% dividends per annum, without the loss of a single dollar for any customer.

We now offer two unusually meritorious investments that are each paying regular dividends of 25 per month or 30 per annum. All investors are protected by a special trust fund that makes these securities as safe as a government bond. If you desire to place your funds to the very best possible advantage write to-day for our free booklets of information, also our free financial paper.

A. L. WISNER & CO., Inc., Bankers
32 Broadway New York

CANCER CURED

Dr. B. F. Bye's Oils for cancers and tumors are a painless cure. Most cases are treated at home. Send for book telling what wonderful things are being done. Gives instant relief from pain. Address Dr. B. F. BYE, 300 N. 111. St., Indianapolis, Ind.

FREE SAMPLE of GOLDEN ROD as it comes from the mine. It's Yours for the Asking. ORE

It will give you a good idea of the wonderful richness of our Bonanza Mines. We own what we consider to be Eleven of the Richest Gold Claims ever staked—among them being the Mineral Hill Group of Idaho, and rich properties in the famous Thunder Mountain Districts. We have a well-developed working mine with 20,000 tons of ore ready to ship. Assays run $25 to $250 a ton. More money is needed for further development.

$15 Will buy $100 Worth of Stock full paid and non-assessable, which should to the near future be worth $500 and pay big dividends. Get in on the ground floor. Monthly payments if desired. Write for G. R. prospectus, Map and Engineer's Reports, also booklet "How to Judge Stocks," free. Address

UNION SECURITY CO., 408 Gaff Building, Chicago, Ill.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Through a remarkable system of profit-sharing investment certificates, which are practically first mortgage bonds, six great industrial enterprises in St. Louis working co-operatively have increased their business over one thousand per cent., and their resources from a few thousands to over three millions in real estate, buildings and tangible property in three years. The investors in those certificates received during the past year alone (1902) a total of 48 per cent. in profits on their investment. Under this plan the investor can withdraw part or all of his investment at ANY time he wishes, the same as though deposited in a savings bank, and takes absolutely no risk. During 1902, three of these enterprises were a heavy source of expense. Now all of them are developed to the point of large profits. One of them started four years ago is the largest of its sort in the world, owns one of the finest buildings in the country, and has assets of a million and a half dollars and has no indebtedness. A new issue of these certificates which promises to be even more successful than the last, has recently been made in order to develop a new enterprise. The nature of the plan makes it necessary to scatter these certificates widely, and in small sums owing to the privilege the investor has of withdrawing his investment at a moment's notice which would require a large reserve of idle money to be kept on hand, if the securities were sold locally. If you have from $10.00 to $5,000 you wish to invest where you can withdraw it instantly in cash, where it will be absolutely secure, where it will pay you 6 per cent. per annum guaranteed, and payable quarterly, and an equal share with the stockholders in the yearly profits without the stockholders risk. Send for Book C, and bank references of THE DEVELOPMENT & INVESTMENT CO., St. Louis, Missouri.

GOFF'S

ANGORA
REGISTERED TRADE MARK

*Whenever you visit the shops in town
Looking for braid to bind your gown
Secure this brand wherever found
The Braid that's known the world around*

THE

Willow Way

It's published for the benefit of all who want to make every day a pay day. Every wage a money maker. Send 10 cents (coin or stamps) for latest issue. Send dime today—tomorrow never comes. Address the publishers,

THE WILLIS B. LOWE CO.,

351 Atlantic Ave.,
Boston, Mass.References:
First National Bank.

- Page 3-f—tells how to make lasting Perfumes, for 10 cents an ounce.
 " 8 tells how to make fragrant Toilet Waters for 5 cents an ounce.
 " 9 tells how to make Bay Rum for 1 cent an ounce.
 " 10 tells how to make Hair Tonic, Shampoo and Barbers' Supplies.
 " 11-tells how to buy and sell Sachet Powders on "trust" schemes.
 " 12 tells how to make your own Cough Syrup. Big saving here.
 " 14-15 tells all about Burwell's "Get well" Specialties.
 " 16 Editorial, personal, and full of tips about mixer business.
 " 17 Important information how to conduct mail order business.
 " 18 tells how to put up and sell all kinds of Cold Cream.
 " 19 tells how to make Vanilla Extract, six formulas worth dollars.
 " 20 tells how to make fifty Flavoring Extracts, also Maple Syrup.
 " 21 tells how to put up and sell your own Flavoring Powders.
 " 22 tells how to make Cake Colors for two cents an ounce.
 " 23 tells how to make your own Essence Jamaica Ginger.
 " 24 The Marvellous Adventures of Lo, the Poor Indian.
 " 25 Ready reference tables; weights, measures, postage rates, etc.
 " 26-27 Price list of bottles, jars, graduates, milling cases, etc.
 " 28 tells about printing and what a single dollar will do.
 " 29 tells about labels for Portunes, Flavorings, etc., plain & fancy.
 " 30-31 Confidential wholesale price list of 187 Home Remedies, etc.
 " 32 Special price list of Floral Oils for making over 200 perfumes.
 " 33 Tells where to get Alcohol, Cologne Spirits at wholesale prices.
 If you have a $100, back cover page tells how to make a $1000.

QUILTED MATTRESS PADS

They are a sanitary necessity for health and comfort and become a luxury when once used. They are quilted of bleached muslin, both sides, with pure white wadding of the finest grade between. These pads come in all sizes, bound ready for use. They will keep the crib in a sanitary condition, and the baby clean and sweet. They wash perfectly. Ask your dry goods dealer for the quilted mattress pads, and if he cannot supply you, write to us. Send for sample of pads. THE EXCELSIOR QUILTING CO., 15 Laight St., New York

FREE TO ALL
HOUSEKEEPERSTHE "1900" BALL-BEARING
FAMILY WASHER WILL BE SENT FREE

to all housekeepers who answer this advertisement, without deposit or advance payment of any kind, freight paid both ways, on 30 days' trial. Unquestionably greatest family labor saver ever invented. Saves time, expense, and wear and tear.

Will do the family washing without boiling clothes, hand-scrubbing or back-breaking. Revolves on bicycle ball-bearings and is therefore easiest running washer ever made. Will do two hours' washing in ten minutes. Washes blankets as well as laces, absolutely clean, and without the slightest injury.

EAST PLYMOUTH, OHIO,
P. O. Ashtabula, O.

We have been using the "1900" Washer since May 15, 1900. Have done over 1200 washings, and I think it is good for as many more. We do family work from Ashtabula. We have used 8 different machines, and the "1900" beats them all for good and fast work and durability.—Geo. M. Burnet.

It costs nothing to try. Sent absolutely free, freight paid both ways, for a trial of thirty days. No money required in advance.

Write at once for book and particulars to

THE "1900" WASHER CO.,

3695, State Street, - BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

References: First National Bank, Binghamton, N. Y.

MEN'S SUITS

From $7 and up.

Each Suit Made to Order in the latest style, entirely new and pretty designs, material of the very best quality Cheviot, Cashmere, or Worsted, absolutely all wool and fast colors, lined with double warp serge or farmer satin, all seams sewed good and strong, buttonholes and buttons sewed on to stay. We make the lapels of Coat just right, the Trousers nicely creased, all seams and every part of the suit nicely pressed and we'll make us employ only skilled tailors. The best Suits you can buy for the money.

A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED

Send us your P.O. address and we will send you different samples and fashion plates to select from, tape measure and measuring black increasing you how to measure. Will then ship suit. O. D. suit to examination, and may be returned in us at our expense if not found exactly as represented. We make this low offer to quickly gain new customers. ELMENDORF each Suit Made to ORDER and you can select what you like and then we will be bound to fit and please you. We also make Gowns, Full Dress, Trunks, etc.

Prizes Albert Suits (Trousers from $2.50 and up.) 60¢ Write us now for FREE SAMPLES as we are giving exceptional value for the money.
Dept. 212, CHICAGO MFG. & MUSE. CO., Wholesale Tailors
87-89-91 Washington St., CHICAGO.
Business—Metropolitan Trust & Savings Bank, Capital $10,000.00.

GOV'T AUCTION REVOLVERS GUNS, Swords and Military Goods. New and Old. Bargains for use or decorating. Large illustrated 15c catalogue mailed 6c stamps. Francis Bannerman, 559 Broadway, N. Y.

LADIES

to do piece work at their homes. We furnish all material and pay from $7 to $25 weekly. Experience unnecessary. Send stamped envelope to ROYAL CO., Desk B. C., 34 Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.

Straight Hair Made Curly

Wash the hair with "California Curly Bark." Only a few applications necessary to make hair curly. First wash makes hair Wavy. Will not injure or change color. A box sent postpaid for $1. Sample package, 50c.

THE CURLY BARK CO., 400 Post St., San Francisco.

BATTERY FAN MOTOR, $7.95

- Battery Table Lamp - $ 8.00
- Battery Hanging Lamp 10.00
- Teapots, complete, 1.50, 1.95
- Electric Door Sells - 1.00
- Electric Carriage Lamps - 2.00
- Electric Hand Lanterns - 2.00
- $1.00 Medical Batteries - 2.50
- $12.00 Belt, Whisker's, 3.50
- Telegraph Outfits - 2.50
- Battery Motors - 1.00 to 10.00
- Bicycle Electric Lights - 2.00
- Electric Railway - 2.15
- Pocket Flash Lights - 1.00
- Necktie Lights - 75c. to 5.00

Send for free book. Describes and illustrates many of the most useful electric devices, at wonderfully small prices. All electrical. The lowest price in the world on everything electrical. Agents can make handsome commissions and many sales. Write for complete information.

OHIO ELECTRIC WORKS, Cleveland, Ohio.

FOR ROASTS

McILHENNY'S Tabasco Sauce

The perfect Seasoning for Soups, Salads, Oysters, Clams, Fish, Sauces, Roasts, Gravies, etc.

Indispensable for the table and in kitchen. Imparts delicious flavor. Insures good digestion. Pure and more healthful than ground pepper.

The Original McIlhenny's Tabasco

Used in leading Hotels, Clubs, and Restaurants for nearly half a century. AT ALL DEALERS.

FREE Write for "Tabasco Book."

New and unique recipes. McILHENNY'S TABASCO, - New Iberia, La.

Watch Free Send for 20 packages of Gluing to sell at 10 cents each, when sold return the $2.00 and the Watch will be sent Free of charge
Loring Mfg. Co.,
Dept. C, New Dorchester, Mass

New Standard Searchlight

By pressing button, instantly throws a strong bright light 50 to 75 feet. Indispensable in the home or on the farm, especially in the sick room and in cases of emergency. Far Superior to lanterns, candles or matches. Absolutely safe and no risk of fire. Will last a lifetime. Fitted with "NEW STANDARD DRY BATTERY" (acknowledged best in the world). An appropriate and USEFUL HOLIDAY GIFT. Price, prepaid until Jan. 1st, $1.50.

Write for Book No. 6.

WM. ROCHE, Inventor & Mfr., 42 Vesey St., New York

The "Sun" Outshines Them All. Safe as a candle; 100 times brighter. Cost 1-6 of kerosene. Makes its own gas. No greasy wicks; no smoky chimney; no odor; no bother.

The "SUN" INCANDESCENT HYDRO-CARBON LAMP

Strong, brilliant, light. Indispensable to all who use the eyes. Conforms to insurance underwriters' rules. Branch supply depots in all larger cities. Liberal commission to agents. Get catalog. Sun Vapor Light Co. BOX 798 CANTON, OHIO
(Licensee of the ground patents for Vapor Lamps.)

To Cure Drunkards.

A Simple Way to Cure Any Drunkard Against His Will.

By using the new odorless and tasteless remedy, which is placed in the coffee or food, any drunkard can be cured. Anyone can use it without the drunkard ever knowing it. It does its work so silently and surely that while the devoted wife, sister, daughter or mother looks on, the drunkard is cured even against his will.

MRS. SAMUEL BOYD.

Every person who has a loved one who is a slave to drink ought to give them this remedy at once.

Mrs. Samuel Boyd says: "With Golden Specific I cured my husband of drinking. I put it in his coffee and after that he could not drink liquor or bear to be where he could smell it."

Write to Dr. J. W. Haines, 1141 Glenn Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, and he will send you a free trial package, which will show you how simple it is to use and how positive is its cure.

FAT IS FOLLY.

when it can be reduced easily, conveniently and best of all, Safely, by the use of

La Parle OBESITY SOAP.

This Obesity Soap (used like an ordinary soap) positively reduces fat, without dieting or gymnastics. Absolutely harmless, never fails to reduce flesh when directions are followed.

Send for book of testimonials. Box of 2 cakes sent prepaid on receipt of $2.00.

Norwood Chemical Co., St. James Bldg., N.Y.

How To Grow Tall

WOULDN'T YOU LIKE TO ADD FROM TWO TO FIVE INCHES TO YOUR HEIGHT?

To be a "good height to dance with," to be "tall enough to see in a crowd," to improve the symmetry of your figure and to add to your general appearance.

It is entirely possible for you to increase your height and accomplish these other advantages in your own home without taking any internal treatment, without drugs, without operation, without pain or injury to yourself, without putting yourself to any inconvenience.

FREE TO ANY SHORT PERSON

In order that anyone can learn how to get increased height, we have prepared an interesting book for free distribution, explaining why some people are short and others tall, and telling how short people can add from two to five inches to their height, and get all the advantages that good height carries with it. All you have to do is to write for this book, stating your height, your weight, your age, your sex, and we will send you full particulars about the secrets of getting increased height and good figure. Address at once

THE CARTILAGE CO., Dept. 24L, Rochester, N. Y.

An Ugly Complexion is a Sin BERRY'S CREOLE TEA

Makes a Beautiful One.

In herb form, 10c; in tablet form, 50c. Send 12c for valuable illustrated booklet on care of health, scalp and complexion, including SCIENTIFIC PALMISTRY. Address

ELLA R. BERRY COMPANY,

208 OLIVE STREET,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Reduce Your Fat

but don't ruin your stomach with a lot of useless drugs and patent medicines. Send to Prof. F. J. Kellogg, 906 Kellogg Bldg., Battle Creek, Mich., for a free trial package of a treatment that will reduce your weight to normal without diet or drugs. The treatment is perfectly safe, natural and scientific. It takes off the big stomach, gives the heart freedom, enables the lungs to expand naturally, and you will feel a hundred times better the first day you try this wonderful home treatment.

Pabst Blue Ribbon

Dear beer to brew, and good beer to buy—for it costs no more than inferior beers. It is the Beer of Quality—your beer.

La Vite
THE AUTOMATIC
Corset Steel.

Locks perfectly tight, but turn the lever and the corset flies open at once. A boon to stout ladies, a luxury to all. Easily attached. Send 25c. for a pair. Our booklet tells all about it.

THE VITE CO.
Adams Bldg., Washington, D.C.

$20,000,000 WORTH OF GINSENG

"Can be marketed annually in China," writes U. S. Consul Johnson from Amoy, China. Entire Chinese population, 400,000,000, uses it for medicinal purposes. Big demand, small supply. Be a Ginseng grower! Easily grown. Profits so immense that true statements seem falsehoods. One acre of 4-year old Ginseng is worth $40,000—this is a conservative statement. Hardy anywhere in the U. S. and Canada. We sell cultivated roots and stratified seed. $10 to $50 worth, properly cared for, will yield a small fortune. Send 4c. for 15-page Book on Ginseng, easily-saved credit in Ginseng and copy of magazine, "The Ginseng Garden."

CHINESE-AMERICAN GINSENG CO.
DEPT. A SCRANTON, PA.

GINSENG $25,000 made from one-half acre. Easily grown throughout the U. S. and Canada. Room in your garden to grow thousands of dollars' worth. Roots and seeds for sale. Send 4c. for postage and get our booklet A. B. telling all about it.
McDOWELL GINSENG GARDEN, Jepson, Mo.

TO FAT PEOPLE

I can reduce your weight 10 to 15 pounds a week without any radical change in what you eat; no nauseating drugs, no light laxatives, no sickening cathartics. I am a regular practicing physician, making a specialty of the reduction of surplus flesh; and after you have taken my treatment a few weeks you will say: "I never felt better in my life."

SAFE, PROMPT AND CERTAIN.
By my treatment your weight will be reduced without causing wrinkles or flabbiness of skin; heavy abdomen, double chin or other evidences of obesity will disappear; your form will acquire symmetry; complexion will be cleared; troubles of heart, kidneys, stomach or other organs will be remedied; and you will be delightfully astonished at the promptness and ease with which these results are accomplished under my system. Satisfaction guaranteed. Write for my new book on "Obesity, Its Cause and Cure," which will be sent sealed in plain envelope. It will convince you. Mention this magazine when writing.

HENRY C. BRADFORD, M.D.,
84 East 31st Street, NEW YORK.

ARE YOU SHORT? Gilbert's Heel Cushions

"Worn inside the shoe," Increase Height, Arch the Instep, Make Better Fitting Shoes. Remove jar in Walking. Indorsed by physicians. Simply placed in the heel, felt down. Don't require larger shoes. 1 lb., 25c.; 1 lb., 50c.; 1 lb., 75c., per pair. Address and don't send name, size shoe, best size desired, and stores. READ 5c. stamp for pair on ten days' trial.

GILBERT MFG. CO., 50 Elm St., Rochester, N. Y.

A Bunion

Cured

BE YOUR OWN CHIROPODIST. We have a handsome 30-page illustrated booklet on "How to have Easy, Healthy, Shapely Feet," which we will mail to any address for a 5c. stamp. Bunions CAN be cured. The booklet tells you how to do it, your own home without cutting and without the slightest inconvenience. It also tells about the prevention and removal of corns, ingrowing toe-nails and the treatment of all kinds of foot troubles. Agents: FOOT REMEDY CO., Suite 547, 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.

Ladies HERE IS A CHANCE

To test for yourselves at a cost of only 50c. the wonderful beautifying qualities of Dr. Campbell's Safe Arsenic Complexion Wafers and Foul's Medicated Arsenic Soap. To prove to you that these complexion remedies are perfectly safe to use and that they will remove every blemish on or under the skin, I will send you a sample package of Wafers and a sample Cake of Soap for 50c. in silver or stamps. Send 50c. to-day to H. B. FOULD, Room 111, 214 Sixth ave., N. Y.

EYE BOOK FREE!

Tells how all Eye and Ear Diseases may be cured at home at small cost by mild medicines. Its handsomely illustrated, full of valuable information, and should be read by every sufferer from any eye or ear trouble. This book is written by Dr. Curtis, originator of the world-famed Mild Medicine Method, which without knife or pain speedily cures most eye and ear cases. Dr. Curtis offers to send this Book absolutely FREE to all who write for it. Address, Dr. F. Geo. Curtis, 353 Shubert Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

Makes Women Beautiful

Marvelous development accomplished by the new and wonderful "Vestro" method of enlarging the Female Bust.

Fatigued and enervated women are quickly developed into commanding figures that excite wonderment and admiration.

A new and surprisingly effective home treatment has been discovered that enlarges the female bust at least six inches. Women who are not lacking in this respect will not be particularly interested, but those who by some unfortunate circumstance of health or occupation are deficient in this development will be very much fascinated by the peculiar prominence achieved by the treatment. It is called "Vestro" and is controlled by the well-known Aurnum Medicine Co.

There is no doubt about the marvelous power of this new treatment to develop the bust to a gratifying extent. Any lady who wishes to know more about Vestro should send her name and address to the Aurnum Medicine Co. They will send free, in plain sealed envelope by mail, a new "beauty book" they have just prepared, also photographs from life showing the actual development induced and a great number of testimonials from physicians, chemists, and prominent ladies all commending the wonderful and remarkable power of Vestro to enlarge the bust in matter how flat the chest may be. Do not fail to write at once. The beauty book and portraits will delight you. All you need do is to send name and address and a two-cent stamp to pay postage. Address AURNUM MEDICINE CO., Dept. B. A., 34 State St., Chicago.

BARRIOS DIAMONDS

Experts Deceived Jewelers Fooled Pawnbrokers Victimized Government Inspectors Puzzled

By Barrios Diamonds. These stones are the most magnificent and faithful imitations ever discovered. They have all the fire, sparkle and luminous colors of real stones and may be worn anywhere with perfect assurance.

Each stone is accurately cut and perfectly polished. Mounted in heavy gold filled. Exquisitely finished and warranted to wear for years. Exact duplicates in appearance of pieces

Worth from $75 to $250

OUR SPECIAL PRICE..... $2

OUR GUARANTEE

We guarantee these stones to be absolutely perfect in every particular and to retain their original beauty and brilliancy forever. We replace any Barrios Diamond, without expense to the purchaser, that fails to give satisfaction.

BEAUTIFUL DESIGNS

This illustration shows the latest and most popular Parisian and New York styles and fancies. Every piece a work of art, its beauty and brilliancy will prove a constant pleasure and delight.

$2 SPECIAL OFFER

As an introduction to Holiday buyers we will send you by mail, postpaid, delivery guaranteed, any article illustrated for $2, with the express understanding that if the goods are not exactly as represented money will be refunded.

BARRIOS DIAMOND CO.

Dept. C. A., 146 State St., Chicago

THE MAIL ORDER BUSINESS

as conducted under the direction of
CEO. R. CRAW

MR. WARD'S SUCCESS

Millions of Dollars have been made by Mr. Montgomery Ward of Chicago, who was the originator of the Mail-Order business. He began his career when he was practically a poor man.

Thirty years ago Mr. Montgomery Ward, the millbroker number of the firm of Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago, Ill., conceived the idea of selling goods direct to the consumer by means of advertisements in the magazines and newspapers, or by circulars or catalogs mailed to a list of names.

Being in exceedingly moderate circumstances, Mr. Ward started in a very humble manner.

He carried a small stock of low-priced goods, and made arrangements with manufacturers to fill his orders direct to his customers on the higher priced articles.

To-day the man or woman who begins a mail-order business on small capital possesses more advantages than did Mr. Ward.

The business may be started by any one, in any town or city and at any time.

My system of mail-order merchandising permits you to start right, in beginning a mail-order business.

It effects the co-operation of the Manufacturer with the Buyer.

I am putting the mail-order business upon a high plane. The members of my Bulletin

Service of Manufacturers and Mail-Order Firms handle only goods of merit, made by the best and most reliable manufacturers.

If my long experience as advertising manager for some of the largest firms in the United States; as a newspaper man; as an ad-writer, critic, advertising agent; as one of the editors of the Mail-Order Register, and as the Mail-Order Editor of the Bookkeeper Magazine of Detroit, Mich., can be of value to you, it may be had in connection with my Bulletin Service of high-class Manufacturers and Mail-Order Firms.

If you desire to engage in the mail-order business on small capital, developing the business of high-class manufacturers with the savings from your salary, or if you have unusually handled cheap, shoddy and cheap goods, send for my proposition.

I have an outfit to sell you or worthless advertising space to dispose of.

Write to-day for my free booklet, "Co-operation for Profit," if you command a small capital of at least $25.

It will be a step toward an independent income and a lucrative, established business of your own.

Address CEO. R. CRAW

Writing, Illustrating and Placing of Advertisements.
Suite 64, 84 Adams St., CHICAGO, ILL.

Be Your Own Boss!

MANY MAKE $2,000.00 A YEAR. You have the same chance. Start a Mail Order Business at home. We tell you how. Money coming in daily. Enormous profits. Everything furnished. Write at once for our "Starter" and FREE particulars. B. C. EREGEES CO., 155 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

Negro Wig 35c, Box Burnt Cork 10c, Carmine for Lips 5c, Large "Phony" Diamond Stud or Ring 25c, or complete outfit 68c. All postpaid. FREE Catalog of 1000 Best Plays and Pamphlet, "The Art of Making Up."

THE TRADEWOMAN CO., Toledo, O.

EYE DISEASES CURED AT HOME

Mrs. J. H. Tyler, Black River, Wash., tells how cataracts were removed from her eyes, at her home, without knife or pain, by

The Madison Absorption Method. It cures Cataracts, Spots, Scum, Granular Lids, Optic Nerve Diseases, and all causes of blindness.

You Can Be Cured At Home at small expense. It has restored sight to thousands after other methods failed. NO SURGICAL OPERATION OR RISK. I want to hear from those disappointed by failures of other methods. I straighten Cross Eyes by a bloodless method always successful.

Ans. Bette, 396 Front St., Aurora, Illinois, was cross-eyed 29 years, now cured. My latest book in color with testimonials and my advice will be sent FREE.

No C. O. D. packages sent unless ordered.

P. C. MADISON, M. D., Suite 212, 80 Dearborn St., CHICAGO, ILL.

Asthma can be Cured

Asthma sufferers need no longer leave home and business in order to be cured. Nature has produced a vegetable remedy that will permanently cure Asthma and all diseases of the lungs and bronchial tubes. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases (with a record of 90 percent. permanently cured), and desiring to relieve human suffering I will send free of charge to all sufferers from Asthma, Consumption, Catarrh, Bronchitis and nervous diseases, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail. Address with stamp, naming this paper.

W. A. NOYES,
847 Powers' Block,
Rochester, N. Y.

Darken Your Gray Hair

DUB'S OZARK HERBS restores gray, streaked or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. Prevents the hair from falling out, promotes its growth, cures and prevents dandruff, and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. IT WILL NOT STAIN THE SCALP. Is not sticky or dirty, contains no sugar, lead, nitrate silver, copper, or poisons of any kind, but is composed of roots, herbs, barks and flowers.

PACKAGE MARKS ONE PINT. It will produce the most luxuriant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry hair, and bring back the color it originally was before it turned gray. Full size package sent by mail, postpaid, for 25 cents. OZARK HERB CO., Block 18, St. Louis, Mo.

HEADACHE

"My father had been a sufferer from sick headache for the last twenty-five years and never found any relief until he began taking your Cascarets. Since he has begun taking Cascarets he has never had the headache. They have entirely cured him. Cascarets do what you recommend them to do. I will give you the privilege of using his name." E. M. Dickson, 1120 Reelner St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good, Do Good. Never Sickens, Weakens or Grips. 10c, 25c, 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped G.C.G. Guaranteed to cure or your money back.

Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or N.Y. 578
ANNUAL SALE, TEN MILLION BOXES

Postal

$25.00

The only real Typewriter at a low price

UNIVERSAL KEYBOARD VISIBLE WRITING
INTERCHANGEABLE TYPE
STRONG MANIFOLDER BEAUTIFUL WORK

Will be sent C. O. D. for one week's trial on receipt of $2.00 to cover Express

Booklet on request

Manufactured and guaranteed by
THE POSTAL TYPEWRITER CO.

Main Office
45 Cliff St., New York Branch
115 Dearborn St., Chicago

LOCKE ADDER

ONLY $5.00

ADD SUBTRACT
MULTIPLY DIVIDE

Correct Table Method
Will Save a Lifetime

CAPACITY, 999,999,999
NEEDLE PUNCH, 100,000,000
C. E. LOCKE, 200 N. W. 10th St.,
St. Paul, Minn.

I Print
My Own
Circulars
Cards &c.
$5 PRESS

Saves money. Big profit printing for others. Large press for book, newspaper etc. Full instruction sent for use. Write for catalogue prices, type, &c. to factory
THE PRESS CO., MERIDEN, CONN.

I CAN PUT YOU RIGHT

Are your efforts properly directed? Are you employed in the line that your ability and natural aptitude best fit you for? I can advise what avocation you are best fitted for. My free book,

"Character in Handwriting."

gives results of thirty years practical experience and tells what every ambitious person should know. Write for it to-day.
Louis Hearnings, Room 23, 2463 Glenwood Ave., Toledo, O.

BIG MONEY IN MAIL-ORDER BUSINESS

People are buying more by mail than ever before; one mail-order house does a business of a million dollars monthly; another receives 2,000 letters daily, nearly all containing money; mail-order trading is unquestionably the business method of the future. The field is large, the possibilities unlimited. Let us send you our plan (free) for starting beginners; it covers every point.
CENTRAL SUPPLY CO., 1090 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

The Sun Never Sets
On the Students of the American School of Correspondence

The map above shows the distribution in New Zealand of students of the American School of Correspondence. Every dot indicates a group of students. Wherever the knowledge of American prosperity, American industry and American enterprise has found its way, there will be found students of the American School of Correspondence.

The courses are Civil, Mechanical, Electrical, Stationary, Locomotive and Marine Engineering; Architecture, Heating, Ventilation and Plumbing, Mechanical and Perspective Drawing, Pen and Ink Rendering, Sheet Metal Patterns, Drafting, Refrigeration, Telephony, Telegraphy, Navigation, and the Manufacture of Cotton and Woolen Cloth. They offer an opportunity to obtain instruction at home under the direction of members of the faculty of a resident engineering college of wide reputation.

The instruction papers are used as text books in the United States Government, in the School of Submarine Defense, Fort Totten, New York; by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., in its "Shop School" and in a number of colleges and schools.

Our courses offer parents who have not means to attend it — if you must support yourself, or have others dependent on you — if you have not the entrance qualifications demanded by a regular college of engineering, the courses of the American School provide a means of fitting yourself for a position requiring technical knowledge without leaving home or giving up your position.

If you are too far from a technical school or college to attend it — if you must support yourself, or have others dependent on you — if you have not the entrance qualifications demanded by a regular college of engineering, the courses of the American School provide a means of fitting yourself for a position requiring technical knowledge without leaving home or giving up your position.

Illustrated catalogue may be had on request.

American School of Correspondence
at Armour Institute of Technology.
ROOM 9d, CHICAGO, ILL.

MARIE JEANNE DU BARRY.

SPECIAL OFFER

French Court Memoirs

FROM Henry of Navarre to and through the reign of Du Barry (whose personal memoirs occupy four of the volumes), this set of books covers the back-story, the kitchen-gossip side of French Court History, much as Guizot covers its outward manifestations. And where so much was set afoot with secret and obscure design, where so little was open and above-board, where bouffon courtois dictated treaties and the wounded vanity of favorites instigated campaigns, where a low-born woman's caprice could send forth the torch to lay waste the half of Europe, it is impossible to comprehend the curious events of history without knowing the intimate details of those underlying causes. It is characteristic of these Memoirs that, in dealing with the peculiar affairs which are associated in every one's mind with French Court history of the period, their very simplicity and frankness purges them of all offense.

The undersigned controls a few sets of these personal French Court Memoirs (translated with fidelity into English), which can be secured in complete sets only, at a very low price, and on small monthly payments, if preferred, provided application be made at once.

These few copies are from a limited numbered and registered 4th edition, bound up to sell at $10 a volume. But through a hinder error the leather of the volumes is imperfectly matched; consequently it becomes advisable to dispose of them outside of regular subscription channels, and at a price about equal to the value of the unbound sheets.

A booklet fully describing the edition will be sent, together with price particulars, if you sign and send the inquiry slip below at once. Address,

J. B. Chadbourne, 11 E. 16th St., New York.

Please send me particulars—advertisement in November Black Cat.

Name _____

Address _____

THE FOUR-TRACK NEWS

An Illustrated Magazine of Travel and Education

MORE THAN 128 PAGES MONTHLY.

Its scope and character are indicated by the following titles of articles that have appeared in recent issues:

Footprints of Columbus in Spain — Illustr'd	Frederick A. Ober
A Watch with a History — Illustr'd	N. S. Olds
A Journey Among the Stars — Illustr'd	Frank W. Mark
In the Great North Woods — Poem	Eva E. Sanford
Where Pilgrim and Puritan Met — Illustr'd	Bonnie Butterworth
In Rip Van Winkle's Land — Poem	Mina Irving
Nature's Chronometer — Illustr'd	H. M. Abbeys
Abandoned Farm — Illustr'd	Howard F. Copestake
The Tarn Oregon — Illustr'd	Alfred Holman
Ancient Prophecies Fulfilled — Illustr'd	George H. Daniels
The Stories the Tablets Tell — Illustr'd	Leah L. Holden
A Little Country Curio — Illustr'd	Kathleen L. Grogg
The Mammot — Illustr'd	Will O. Snel
When Mother Goes Away — Poem	Joe Cline
A Little Bit of Holland — Illustr'd	Charles S. Wells
The Romance of Reality — Illustr'd	June W. Galtier
The War Eagle — Illustr'd	Mary L. Austin
Under Mexican Skies — Illustr'd	Marin B. French
Niagara in Winter — Illustr'd	Orrin E. Dunlap
Little Histories — Illustr'd:
Old Fort Putnam	William J. Langston
Charter Oak Chair	Evie R. Dunn
The Confederate White House	Herbert Brooks

SINGLE COPIES 5 CENTS, or 50 CENTS A YEAR.

Can be had of Newsdealers, or by addressing

GEORGE H. DANIELS, Publisher,

Room 44 7 East 42d Street, New York

OPIUM MORPHINE and LIQUOR
Habit Cured, Sanatorium Established 1875. Thousands having failed elsewhere have been cured by us. Treatment can be taken at home. Write The Dr. J. L. Stephens Co., Dept. B9, Lebanon, O.

Lovely Complexion FREE.

A Trial Package mailed FREE which will give any lady a beautiful complexion. It is not a face powder, cream, cosmetic or bleach, but is absolutely pure and you can use it privately at home. It permanently removes moth patches, redness, crow's feet, pimples, blackheads, fleshworms, sallowness, freckles, tan, sunburn, and all complexion disfigurements. Address,

MADAME M. RIBAUT, 5275 Elm Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Too Fat

Don't ruin your stomach with a lot of useless drugs. Our method is perfectly safe, natural and scientific. It strengthens the heart, allows one to breathe easily and takes off Double Chin, Big Stomach, Fat Hips, etc. Send your address and 4 cts. to the Hall Chemical Co., "Box K. A.," St. Louis, Mo., for Free Trial Treatment.

ment. No starving. No sickness. It reduces weight from 5 to 15 lbs. a month, and is perfectly harmless.

How far have you walked?

THE AMERICAN PEDOMETER

Registers Every Step You Take.
Carried like a watch in the pocket; can be regulated to suit step of wearer. $1.00

The average man has no idea of the number of miles he covers in a day. Everybody should carry a Pedometer.

If your dealer cannot supply you, send us One Dollar and we will mail you one in handsome nickel case. Every One Fully Guaranteed.

In addition to above we make a Pedometer with a 100 mile dial which we will mail to any address for $1.50.

THE AMERICAN PEDOMETER CO., Dept. L, New Haven, Conn.

MAGIC and Stereopticon for public entertainments, illustrating historic and current events, popular songs, etc. Nothing affords better opportunity for men with small capital to MAKE MONEY.

Send for free. Illustrated catalogue, tells what an outfit costs, explains the operation and instructs you how to conduct paying entertainments.

Send for List of Latest Films

LANTERNS

REALLISTER, Mfg. Optician
49 Nassau Street,
New York.

YOUR ATTENTION Mr. Smoker

SAVE ONE-HALF OF SMOKING EXPENSE

We save you 50 per cent., not by cutting prices, but by cutting out the retailer's 30 per cent., the salesman's 10 per cent., and the jobber's 10 per cent., putting these three unnecessary profits in your pocket. Our proposition rests upon our ability to please you. We send varied assortments. Having selected a cigar of your choice you may count upon getting the same every time, delivered to your door. ALL CHARGES PREPAID. For the year door, we will send you a trial box of twelve assorted cigars, such as retail at 10c and two for a quarter; or, for 8c, twelve assorted 10c and 15c values. Each cigar separately wrapped and described. At any rate write for our illustrated booklet, which explains every thing. All transportation charges prepaid. Address: G. O. IVES, Ave. A, BINGHAMTON, N. Y. For reference, any Commercial Agency or City National Bank.

PRESIDENT SUSPENDERS

For a Gift

In Beautiful Boxes For CHRISTMAS
All stores 50c and $1.00
or mail prepaid

The C. L. Edgerton Mfg. Co., Box 101, Shirley, Mass.

"REVERSIBLE"
Linene
Collars & Cuffs.

REVERSIBLE
TASSO

Save Money and Trouble

Perfect in fit, never ragged or uncomfortable. Very convenient, stylish, economical. Made of fine cloth and exactly resemble linen goods. Turn down collars are reversible and give double service.

No Laundry Work.

When soiled, discard. We send by mail prepaid ten collars or five pairs of cuffs for 50c. Sample collar or pair of cuffs for 5c. In U. S. stamps. Name size and style.

REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. O, Boston.

It is easy to claim "pure beer," but one must double the cost to make it.

Schlitz is actually pure.

We go 1400 feet down for water.

We spend fortunes on cleanliness.

We not only filter the beer, but filter all the air that touches it.

We age the beer for months, so it cannot cause biliousness. We Pasteurize every bottle after it is sealed.

For fifty years we have insisted on purity, and now all the world knows it. The result is a sale exceeding a million barrels annually.

Isn't absolute purity as important to you as to others?

Ask for the Brewery Bottling.

Any of these beautiful, genuine diamonds and fine pearls, in solid gold, hand-made mountings will be sent direct from our factory on receipt of price, or C. O. D., subject to inspection. Order by number. We send goods prepaid and guarantee safe delivery. Your money back without a question if you are not wholly pleased. Our Diamonds are of superior quality and we sell only fine, high-grade goods and list everything at wholesale prices. Our beautifully illustrated Catalogue shows thousands of photographs of the newest and finest goods. IT'S FREE—send for it to-day and save one-half on your Christmas shopping. We are the largest concern in the business and one of the oldest, — Est. 1840. We refer to the Commercial National Bank of Chicago. Capital two million dollars.

S. T. ALTEMUS & CO.
Diamonds, Watches, Jewelry, Sterling Silver,
Cut Glass, Novelties, etc., etc.

23 M, Stewart Building,
Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

Prices listed in the image include: C10 $3.25, C28 $25.00, C15 $10.00, C19 $3.00, C22 $6.00, C54 $1.75, C82 $4.00, C86 $9.00, C52 $1.75, C85 $1.75, C44 $4.00, C18 $1.25, C81 $2.50, C69 $5.00, C17 $25.00, C40 $2.00, C51 $1.25, C43 $7.00.

The Only Original of All Safety Razors is
The ORIGINAL and mechanically perfect

STAR SAFETY RAZOR

guarantees you not only comfort but luxury in your daily shave. If you are traveling, you will find it most convenient, perfectly safe, and easy to manipulate.

The Star Safety Razor, as made by Kampfe Bros. (original inventors of the Safety Razor) for over 25 years, is used daily by over 5,000,000 people. This proves it to be a razor of merit. Imitators have tried to copy our razor, but if you insist upon getting the "5 STARS" (our trade-mark) you will be sure of satisfaction. Every razor is carefully tested before leaving our factory.

THE NEW STAR STROPPER guarantees absolute perfection to the user of the razor. Send for catalogue. Razors, complete, $2.00. NEW STARSTROPPER, $1.50 sets, $2.50 and up.

KAMPFE BROS., 8-12 Reade Street, New York
Or all leading dealers in high-class cutlery.
Please mention this Magazine.

PARKER LUCKY CURVE FOUNTAIN PEN

If I could convey to you how much real pleasure, comfort and satisfaction there is in store for you should you decide to become an owner and user of one of my fountain pens, I am sure you would not be long without. I have never been satisfied with making merely a good pen, but I am making what is acknowledged to be absolutely the best pen in the world. Honest pens that will wear and are capable of many years of satisfactory use.

Special features are the famous "Lucky Curve." Anti-Break Cap and Accident Policy, insuring against breakage for one year, any rubber part of the fountain. If you cannot find one of the 2,000 dealers, who sell my pens, please order direct, as I can more than please you. Parker pens range in price from $1.40 for No. 1, which is a nice little pen, fully warranted, to $2.00 for No. 18, larger than the No. 1, to $3.50 for Nos. 20 or 220, Screw Joint or Jointless. Very popular numbers.

$4.00 for Nos. 24 or No. 224.
$5.00 for No. 25 or No. 225.

These latter pens are indeed magnificent goods of large size. I also sell a dollar pen, the Palmer (without the Lucky Curve), an excellent pen for the money.

Let me send you my catalogue which shows cuts of the foregoing as well as many other styles and "The Reason Why," also the name of a local dealer who sells the "Lucky Curve."

Please do not forget that a Parker Pen makes a splendid Christmas present. Some people have bought as many as a dozen for presents.

Kindly write me to-day.

GEO. N. PARKER, The Parker Pen Co., Danvers, Vt., U. S. A.

P. S.—If you will state in your letter that you are an intending purchaser of a Fountain Pen, I will send you, complimentary, a 6-inch Aluminum Rule and Paper Cutter, on receipt of stamps for postage—to others 25 cents.

Grape-Nuts

There is more nourishment that the body will absorb in ONE pound of GRAPE-NUTS than in TEN pounds of Meat, Wheat, Oats or Bread. This is a solid, sound, scientific truth. There's a reason.

Physicians find no stomachs too weak to digest Grape-Nuts and grow strong upon the food.

And It is delicious.

Kuyler's COCOA

MAY JUSTLY BE CALLED
"EXTRA SPECIAL"

PURITY, QUALITY & FLAVOR

cannot be excelled and the price is within reach of all -

WHY NOT GET THE BEST?

Our only style Can and your Grocer sells it.

DYSPEPSIA AND OTHER Stomach Troubles

Quickly Relieved and Positively Cured by the Use of Glycozone

an absolutely harmless germicide. Subdues inflammation, and by cleansing the membrane of the stomach of abnormal secretions, restores it to perfect health and effects a cure.

For any stomach trouble it will do good, and generally cure.

Used and recommended by leading physicians everywhere for the last twelve years.

Sold by leading druggists, or sent prepaid on receipt of $1.00.

None genuine without my signature on label

Prof. Charles H. Hirsch

Dept. C.

63 Prince Street, N. Y.

THE HATS OF LATEST VOGUE

MADE IN OUR OWN FACTORIES AND SOLD WITH GUARANTEE OF BETTER SATISFACTION THAN COMES WITH HATS OFFERED AT NEARLY TWICE OUR
$3 PRICE

1170 Broadway New York HAWES VON CAL CO. INC. 73 Summer St. Boston
Factories, DANBURY, CONN.

ACCREDITED AGENTS EVERYWHERE